WILD RUMOR MUSSOLINI SLAIN STIRS SLAVS

LONDON, March 29 (INS)—A Reuters Agency dispatch from Belgrade today said rumors circulated in the Yugoslavian capital that Premier Mussolini was killed in an Italian revolution. There was no confirmation in official circles. The British agency suspected the rumors were spread to discredit British and American correspondents. According to the story, Crown Prince Umberto and Marshal Pietro Badgolio, deposed chief of staff, led the revolt. The story created such a sensation that it disorganized the capital's telephone system.

BRITISH ROUT ITALIANS IN GREAT SEA BATTLE

Damaged

In one of the greatest naval battles of the war, British and Greek naval units damaged another Italian battleship of the Littorio class (shown here) . . . a 35,000-ton vessel. Two cruisers were also damaged in the eastern Mediterranean engagement, the British Admiralty announced.

BRITISH BATTLE DUCE FLEET

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—The British navy, teamed up with Greek sea forces and the RAF, has caught the Italian fleet in the open in the eastern Mediterranean and damaged another of Premier Mussolini's heaviest battleships, a number of cruisers and a destroyer in a far-flung battle, the government announced today.

A communique, the second of the day, said:

"Further information on the naval action in the Eastern Mediterranean is not yet available, but rafts containing Italian survivors have been reported this morning by our aircraft.

"It may, therefore, be assumed that at least one Italian ship has been sunk."

Assuming that two Italian battleships which were under construction last year have been put in service, the British said this left Italy with only two capital ships.

The first announcement telling of the sensational climax to the long cat-and-mouse game the British fleet has played with the Fascists in "mare nostrum" said it appeared that at least one Littorio class battleship (Italy's newest) had been damaged and that two enemy cruisers were very severaly damaged.

PLANES ATTACK

Then came a Royal Air Force communique from Cairo, telling of a swoop on Italian warships in the Ionian sea between Italy and Greece in which hits were scored on two cruisers and a destroyer.

Apparently all this was one continuing action which began yesterday and still was in progress today, for the Admiralty credited the RAF and the Greeks with participation in announcing that "naval operations of some importance are taking place in the eastern Mediterranean."

The British already had badly smashed one of the Italy's two battleships of the Littorio class.

Whether two Italian cruisers had been hit by the navy's rifles and two more by RAF bombs was not clear from the two communiques.

The admiralty promised further reports as soon as vailable, however.

The British said a battleship of the 35,000-ton Littario clas and two others were damaged by torpedoes in an aerial attack at Taranto naval base Nov. 11; another battleship of the Vittorio class was hit by a torpedo in a naval engagement two weeks later, and a fifth battleship subsequently was tropedotd by aircraft from the Ark Royal.

DUCE FLEET SCATTERS

In the British view none of these damaged ships could have been recommissioned and put back into action.

An earlier Admiralty communique said:

"So far only preliminary reports are available, but from thehe it appears that yesterday our naval forces operating under the command of Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham sighted Italian cruisers and destroyers.

"The enemy force scattered, but some units have been brought to

U.S. CONVOY OF SHIPS TO BRITAIN SET

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 29—One of the most important officials in the government today advised International News Service that plans have been drafted for U. S. naval convoy of merchant ships for Britain and only await President Roosevelt's approval.

This official believes the convoy program will receive the President's approval and be initiated within the next two or three weeks. His words were:

"It is decidedly imminent."

Questioned as to nature of the convoy program, the official declined to give details. He called attention, however, to the President's recent "fireside chat," in which Mr. Roosevelt said:

"The great task of this day, the deep duty which rests upon us is to move products from the assembly lines of our factories to the battle lines of democracy —now."

From other sources, it was learned that high Navy officials are confident that the U. S. Navy can execute convoy duty in the Atlantic without weakening the U. S. fleet in the Pacific. One naval authority said:

"We have ample ships in the Atlantic to carry on this work. As a matter of fact, the possibility of convoy duty in the Atlantic was given serious consideration before the Navy agreed to release those 50 destroyers to Britain. But whatever happens, there will be no weakening of the fleet in the Pacific."

EXHAUSTS SUBJECT

The convoy program has been drawn up by high national defense officials, including naval officers.

Slavs Still Keep Nazis Guessing

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 29 (AP)—The German legation today ordered even German newspaper men to leave Yugoslavia in the apparent conviction that the new Yugoslav government will offer no acceptable compromise to Axis wishes.

The British, apparently expecting that Yugoslavia may become a theater of war, ordered women and children to leave.

The government, facing the possibility of an internal rift with Croat minority leaders, kept Germany waiting for an answer to her renewed demands for a definite, written statement of Yugoslav foreign policy.

More than a score of German newspaper men were involved in the legation order, and only two were permitted to remain with the diplomatic staff.

The German evacuation order, which originally applied only to Belgrade, was extended to all Serbia and again broadened tonight to include the wives and children of the diplomatic staff.

Such precautions were not taken even in Belgium and the Netherlands, Germans said.

AIR, RIVER TRAFFIC HALTS

Equally as significant of the Nazi attitude was the order of German commercial air line, Lufthansa, cancelling all flights over Yugoslav territory.

The Yugoslav government coincidentally suspended traffic of German barges and other craft on the Danube river.

Military operators took over telephone communication in Belgrade.

The Yugoslav general staff conferred with the German minister, Viktor von Heeren. German sources said they sought to smooth the difficulties caused by the popular demonstrations.

A German courier arriving from Athens declared he saw the train carrying former Regent Prince

Cardinal Back Home, Hits U. S. War Trend

By JAMES F. McENANEY

Condemning Administration leaders in Washington who through "secret maneuvers" and "foolish ambitions and vanity," are getting the United States nearer and nearer into the European holocaust, William Cardinal O'Connell, returned to Boston today following his annual southern winter vacation.

For the first time in many years the dean of the American Hierarchy granted a press interview in the salon of the Eastern Steamship liner Boston shortly after it docked here.

LOOKS RESTED

In opening his interview the Cardinal said:

"I have been praying every day since leaving Boston that the light of peace might shine once again in Europe and that our country stays out of this war.

"It seems a rather strange sort of thing that our government is keeping many things it is doing veiled in utmost secrecy.

"I cannot understand it. There are so many secret maneuvers being executed in Washington that seem to be getting us nearer and nearer into this war.

TOO MUCH MYSTERY

"These things do not seem to tally with our democratic form of government. They are not telling the people what the real story is behind it all and what the purposes really are.

"I am wondering just where we are in this present affair. It is not quite the fair thing for any government to do—keeping its people in the dark. There is absolutely too much mystery and if the government continues on puzzling the people, it seems only logical that the people will eventually lose trust in their government.

"It is a serious and dangerous thing to toy with such sacred trusts. It was distrust in governments that brought about revolution in Europe, and we don't want to see any such thing happen in our country.

At this point the Cardinal broke off his interview to stress the fact he was speaking purely as a humble American citizen and expressing not only his own sentiments, but those of a great number of persons, representing a cross section of the nation's citizenry whom he conversed with in Florida.

"One of the popular antagonisms today," added the prelate, "is that anyone who seems to tell the truth of conditions existing in the country or against war, finds things are made quite disagreeable for them. That is not quite a pleasant condition. It blocks the truth.

"I am not speaking pro or contrary of our government, but merely echoing the sentiments of so many others in all conditions of life.

MUST RESPECT LAW

"I only hope that saying this now will bring the truth to life and things we should know.

"Where are we in this situation"

Asked if he would comment on

TOMORROW THEY MUST PART

RICHARD SOBELMAN AND MOTHER
She Has Him Till Tomorrow

DIVORCED WIFE BIDS GOODBYE TO HER SON

Too fast today, the minutes ticked off for Mrs. Marie Sobelman—minute after minute, to make the hour, too swiftly followed by the succeeding hour.

"As far as I am concerned," said Mrs. Sobelman, "I have this one day to live. After he is gone there is nothing left for me."

Because the attractive 26-year-old Cambridge mother, who lost out in court and who now is wife no longer, must surrender tomorrow the five-year-old son whose custody she fought for against David Sobelman of Lothian rd., Brighton.

She will not have little Richard again then, and she will not see him except on visits she is permitted to make him at Hillside School in Marlboro.

ORDEREED TO SCHOOL

It was part of the court order by Judge John V. Mahoney that the boy be placed in the school, the court order coming after he had denied Mrs. Sobelman's petition for divorce and had granted a decree and custody to the husband.

That was last Tuesday, but not until today did the young mother break the news to Richard, and then he said, in all the seriousness of his five years:

"You'll come and see me, won't you? You won't forget me?"

More than ever Mrs. Sobelman held the child close today in her father's apartment in River st., Cambridge.

"I did everything I could for the child," she said sadly, "but to realize that I haven't another chance seems unfair. It is now that the child needs his mother most.

FEARS FOR RICHARD

"I'll be truthful; I took a glass of ale now and then, but if that makes a mother unfit to care for her child I guess nearly every home in the universe would be broken up.

"I fear more for Richard than I do for myself. The poor child doesn't know what to think."

Mrs. Sobelman said she hopes to find some kind of employment after she has recuperated from the nervous strain of her marital battle with her ex-husband.

CLUES NARROW SEARCH FOR SLAYER OF DOCTOR

RICHMOND, Me., March 29—Announcing they expect a break in the case at any moment, state investigators today narrowed their search for the slayer of Dr. Luverne Harris Joss, 38-year-old woman physician, to those in this tiny community who knew her well.

State police were ordered to abandon the hunt for a "bearded itinerant" who, the victim's husband, Dr. Merrill Joss, said had unsuccessfully sought to buy narcotics from him shortly before the murder.

Authorities refused to give an explanation, save to say they have discovered fingerprints important to the case and the one they seek probably knew the unusual floor plan of the 100-year-old home of the Josses well.

At the same time, State Police Capt. Joseph Young admitted that a bundle of blood-stained clothing had been taken from the brick colonial dwelling and that microscopic examinations were being made at laboratories in Augusta.

ALL QUESTIONED

First to promise a speedy solution to the case was Atty. Gen. Frank Cowan, who questioned all persons in the town who knew Mrs. Joss well.

That number included her 35-year-old physician husband, who aided authorities in a four-hour recital of all the facts leading up to his discovery of his wife's body, her skull crushed, at the foot of the cellar stairs.

An autopsy showed Mrs. Joss died of repeated blows on the head, at least 27, from a heavy object—possibly an andiron. The murder weapon has not been found despite extensive search of the entire town.

Another item which puzzled in-

May 18 Proclaimed "I Am an American" Day by President

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt today proclaimed Sunday, May 18 as "I am an American' Day to be observed "in recognition of our citizens who have attained their majority or who have been naturalized within the past year."

The proclamation asked federal, state and local officials and patriotic, civic and educational organizations to join in exercises "calculated to impress upon all our citizens, both native born and naturalized, the special significance of citizenship in this nation."

400 at Harvard Hiss Resolve Hitting Reds

More than 400 Harvard students today booed and hissed F. Stephan MacArthur, Jr., director of the National Foundation of American Youth, when he attempted to introduce an anti-Communist resolve at a meeting of the National Conference for Democracy at Harvard University.

MacArthur, his voice drowned out by jeers of the students, was forced to leave the lecture hall amid a bedlam of hostile shouts after the Harvard yard police had been called to quell the disturbance.

Addressing Robert Stange, chairman of the meeting, MacArthur had sought to read a pro-American resolution in behalf of the conference, but had been ruled out of order.

When he again tried to gain the floor, shouts and hissing broke out.

ORDERED TO SIT DOWN

"This resolution," he declared, "is to answer charges of Communism and Nazism against this organization. You have been accused of Communism—now is the time to go on record as an American organization."

Chairman Stange declared that the resolution was out of order and ordered MacArthur to sit down. At this point the yard police entered and in the midst of the ensuing disorder, MacArthur left the hall.

The resolution which had been sponsored by the National Foundation for American Youth, of which Gene Tunney is chairman, read as follows:

"We affirm our faith and belief in the American system of government and the American way of life. We reject and condemn Communism, Fascism and Nazism and the dictatorships of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin. We condemn the Nazi-Soviet pact as a war-making alliance. We condemn the Axis aggressors and invaders, including Stalin, for the invasion of Finland, Poland and Rumania."

George Pelley of Norwood, a Harvard student, was howled down when he came to the support of the resolve.

DROWNED OUT

"I believe in freedom of speech," Pelley declared, but his appeal was drowned out by the shouting.

After the meeting MacArthur declared he would submit the resolution in writing to the resolutions committee of the conference.

"This resolution is one that no American can hesitate to agree with," he said.

Boy Killed, Pal Hurt by Truck

An 11-year-old Malden boy is dead and his 11-year-old playmate is in Malden Hospital with painful injuries as the result of being struck today by a city-owned truck in Green st., Malden.

The dead boy is George Corkery of Shawmut ter. who suffered a cracked chest and punctured lungs. In the hospital is John Hartnett of Madison st. who has a broken collarbone and back injuries.

According to police, the boys darted from the sidewalk directly in the path of a truck driven by former City Councilor John J. Hickey now a park department employe.

Liner Captain Admits Guilt

Failure to check the course of his ship before leaving the pilot house to go below was a contributing cause of the grounding of the Merchants & Miners liner, Kent, in Buzzard's Bay, March 12, Capt. William J. B. Hudgins admitted today before a federal trial board at the Appraisers' Stores.

Both Capt. Hudgins and the Kent's second officer, Harry E. Lewis, pleaded guilty to charges of inattention to duty and negligent navagation.

The charges were preferred against them following a federal investigation.

The captain testified that before leaving the pilot house he gave an order to the ship's quartermaster to change the course to West by South.

Quartermaster Walter B. Stevenson admitted he had received an order from Capt. Hudgins, but understood it to call for a southwest-by-west course.

Quincy Youth Suicide in Car

JUDGE NIPS MAN SUBBING FOR BROTHER

By recalling a selective service case of a month ago, Judge Samuel Eisenstadt of Roxbury court, also chairman of Draft Board No. 26 in Roxbury, today thwarted the attempt of a 25-year-old youth to appear in court under the name of his brother, a Cambridge City Hospital interne.

When Judge Eisenstadt called the case of Dr. Sidney Wilker, 27, of Elm Hill ave., Roxbury, who had been summoned to court for ignoring an overtime parking tag, the interne's brother, Joseph, answered the call.

Judge Eisenstadt asked Joseph why he hadn't brought the parking tag to the police station after the car was tagged about a month ago.

"I was home sick at the time and I couldn't bring it up," responded the young man.

"By the way," recalled Judge Eisenstadt, "aren't you an interne at Cambridge City Hospital. Didn't I grant you deferment as an interne at that time?"

Considerably flustered, the youth replied, "No, that was my brother," and then disclosed that his own name was Joseph Wilker.

After consulting records revealing that the youth had figured in 12 parking violations since 1936, Judge Eisenstadt looked towards the prisoner's dock and said:

"I have a good mind to put you in that dock over there. Now you run out of here as fast as your legs can carry you before I change my mind."

The judge then issued a default warrant for Dr. Wilker.

Warn Gay Spots Near Edwards

At Camp Edwards, Army medical inspectors, in anticipation of a near-record-breaking payday Monday and possibly a record-breaking spending spree, made a surprise tour of inspection of all night clubs, restaurants and hotels near the military reservation.

Army officers announced that the inspection tour was not to be construed as a campaign of persecution. With pay day coming up Monday, they were endeavoring to give the operator of any place found "off limits" an opportunity to correct conditions in time to benefit from soldier patronage.

At the camp also officers were preparing for another large turnout of visitors, while some 7000 men of the VD there themselves planned to leave the camp on week-end leaves.

Another highlight on the military front was announcement that the 2d Battalion, 102d Field Artillery, in command of Lieut.-Col. Frank Crowe of Lynn, staged Camp Edwards' first "blackout march."

During the blackout march at Camp Edwards, the battalion, in a convoy a mile and a half long, moved over the road to Shawnee Forest, via Route 28, and returned with all lights extinguished during part of the trip.

'Out of Night' Author, Free On Bail, Fears Death Abroad

NEW YORK, March 29—Back into "the night," where he says "certain" death awaits him, was the fate that loomed today for mysterious Jan Valtin, author of the current best seller "Out of the Night."

INTO THE NIGHT?—Richard Krebs, who wrote best seller "Out Of The Night" under pseudonym of Jan Valtin (center, wearing striped tie) is interviewed by reporters as he leaves Ellis Island under bond. A German refugee, he faces deportation.

The self-described former OGPU and Gestapo secret agent, whose expose of their brutal technique has shocked the American reading public, faces possible deportation back to his native Germany, and into the clutches of Nazis, who, he says, are lusting for his blood.

Valtin, whose real name is Richard Julius Herman Krebs, was taken into custody yesterday on Ellis Island, but was temporarily set free after posting $5000 in Liberty Bonds.

GOES INTO HIDING

His whereabouts today, as it has been since publication of his book, was cloaked in mystery.

Valtin turned himself over to Immigration authorities voluntarily, freely admitting that he entered the United States illegally. He said he had no passport at the time.

"But I made no secret of my arrival and notified the Immigration Department that I was here without papers," he said. "When the alien registration law went into effect, I immediately registered. I have no country now, except that I regard America as my country, and I hope to be able to apply for United States citizenship."

BLAMES FORMER PALS

The author, who, in his book, describes his own part in the "liquidation" of suspected foes of Communism, while an OGPU agent, and of anti-Nazis while a Gestapo agent, attributed his plight to efforts of former associates in this country to "smear me."

His counsel, Morris L. Ernst, said either Communist or Nazi agents in the United States would be happy to send Valtin back to Russia or Germany.

The Jutice Department in Washington charges Valtin entered this country on two occasions, that he served a three-year sentence in San Quentin prison for assault, from 1926 to 1929, and that he advocated the forcible overthrow of this government as a Communist.

COUNSEL CONFIDENT

But, while indicating he was prepared to employ every means to thwart deportation, Ernst belittled the idea that such steps would be taken, declaring Valtin was "the most valuable person in America today."

The United States, Ernst said, "has never in its history deported a human being to a country where they are waiting to string him up; that is our system of political asylum."

He said Valtin's presence here was important, "because he is able to let the working people know what the Communists are doing to parts of the labor movement."

Hugh Pollock, an attorney associated with Ernst, described Valtin as "one of the outstanding enemies of both Communism and Nazi-ism and, as such, is feared and persecuted by both."

NOT UNDER U. S. PROTECTION

At least one theory of the mysterious Valtin's presence in this country was eliminated by his "technical" arrest yesterday, and that was the oft-mentioned idea that he was allowed to stay here because he was collaborating with the FBI.

Although inferring he had much to offer federal agents concerning this country's interests, both his attorneys emphatically denied that he was under secret service protection.

Ernst declared that skillful Nazi and Communist propaganda was designed to get the case bracketed with those of Mrs. Earl Browder and Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe, both of whom are faced with deportation.

"The difference is," he said, "that the other two, if they are deported, would be sent back to friendly countries. This is not true of Valtin. Either Germany or Russia would gladly issue a passport for Valtin to get him back there."

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization is arranging a formal hearing of Valtin's case. If they decide to deport him, the Department of Justice can review the case.

U. S. PHYSICIANS WARNED OF DEADLY POISON PILLS

CHICAGO, March 29 (AP)—The American Medical Ass'n warned today that a powerful sleeping tablet had accidentally been substituted for a new drug in the manufacture of 410,000 tablets of the drug.

It added there was a possibility that two patients who died of pneumonia had received the drug.

The association said the drug was sulphathiazole, prepared by a New York drug concern. The company, the AMA said, had inadvertently contaminated sulphathiazole with phenobarbital. Sulphathiazole is used in the treatment of pneumonia and certain infections.

ALL DOCTORS WARNED

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the AMA Journal, said the company had bottled 410,000 of the wrong tablets and made wholesale shipments before the error was discovered in December. The concern immediately began to recall all orders from wholesalers and notified the Federal Food and Drug Administration, which has sent hundreds of inspectors into the field to trace the shipments.

As soon as the AMA was advised of the mishap, Dr. Fishbein said, it began contacting physicians known to have case histories involving the interchange of the two drugs. Tablets of the two drugs were the same color and size and look alike.

The association said that deaths attributed to use of the drug included a 19-months-old baby in East St. Louis, Ill., and a man in Farmington, Mo.

HOW TO PROVE IT

Other cases in East the AMA said, involved a man who slept 48 hours after taking the product; a nine-year-old boy who slept 30 hours and a woman who became drowsy after taking a few tablets. All were expected to recover.

Sulphathiazole is a derivative of sulphanilamide, a new drug which physicians have found useful in checking many different diseases.

The new refinement, of use particularly in combating staphylococcus infections, was placed on the market last fall.

Dr. Fishbein said the product which had been improperly prepared could be distinguished by the number MP029, distributed by the Winthrop Chemical Co. of New York, one of the country's largest drug concerns.

DELIVERS NEW NOTE

Von Heeren was reported authoritatively to have delivered a new note last night, apparently reflecting Nazi dissatisfaction with the new cabinet's declaration yesterday that Yugoslavia would be unable to fulfill the terms of her four-day-old membership in the Axis alliance.

Dr. Vladimir Macek, the homespun leader of several million Croats and vice-premier in this cabinet as well as in that of deposed Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic, appeared to hold the key to the future development of the nation's domestic and foreign fate.

He deliberated with his lieutenants in Zagreb for hours yesterday, but early today was said to be still undecided whether to stick with the cabinet of Premier-General Dusan Simovic or retire into the opposition ranks in which he fought for two decades until he won an agreement with Cvetkovic in 1939 for Croatian home rule.

ARMY MASSES

A Yugoslav army of 1,200,000 men was massed on the kingdom's northern and eastern frontiers, apparently to back yesterday's decision of non-compliance with the Axis pact. The question, however, of whether the government would accede to Nazi wishes to fulfill all terms of the pact or fight was shoved, temporarily at least, into the background.

The dominant question here was whether the internal unity of this nation of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes first realized only a few weeks before the war began, would be jeopardized again—with all that such disunity would imply for national defense and a united front against Germany and Italy.

Macek's newspaper, Hrvatski Dnevnik, said in an editorial this morning that the vice-premier would not decide to stay or to quit until he received a full report on the new situation. His friends said he was demanding of Simovic:

Pledge that Croatian home rule will not only be maintained but even increased.

Complete neutrality and peace with all Yugoslavia's neighbors.

CROATS FACE FIRST ATTACK

He was said to fear that Croatia, the northern province of the kingdom, would bear the first fury of an Axis attack and thus desired fulfillment of Tuesday's commitments in Vienna.

Macek's newspaper vigorously attacked some of the men in the Simovic cabinet, charging they opposed Croatian home rule. The Governor of Croatia, however, was undestood to be negotiating for continued Croat representation in the cabinet.

In Belgrade, 17-year-old King Peter II, who announced that he had assumed the title of General of Aviation on taking power Thursday, conferred early today with Premier General Simovic, presumably with reference to the Von Heeren note, which reliable quarters said apparently did not fix a time limit for a reply.

Von Heeren was said to have informed Gen. Simovic that Hitler considers Yugoslavia's signature on the Axis pact binding, whether Peter and Parliament ratify it or not. The cabinet informed Von Heeren yesterday that the pact would not be denounced, but added that neither will it be ratified.

NBC in New York picked up a broadcast by the British radio last night quoting a Belgrade, Yugoslavia, report as saying Von Heeren had been recalled to Germany after the audience with Simovic. —Editor's Note.

YOUNG RULER KEEPS NAZIS WAITING—In a hitherto unpublished picture is 17-year-old King Peter II of Yugoslavia who seized the government's control in a coup d'etat in which Prince Regent Paul was ousted with the cabinet. WAR CLOUDS GATHERING FAST, BERLIN'S WARNING TO SLAVS

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, March 29 (INS)—Germany will stage a military and air blitzkrieg against Yugoslavia unless Belgrade offers strong evidence of its goodwill within a few days, neutral quarters in Berlin predicted today.

"War clouds are gathering fast," these sources said, indicating that "patience" of the Reich will not last much beyond the beginning of next week.

Significantly, all German quarters stress the fact that the Croats are showing a difference of opinion with the Serbs.

There is every sympton that the Reich is banking on a split between the Croats and Serbia. Headlines in afternoon papers stress "calm in Croatia" and "Croats under Serb pressure."

So far as can be judged, all signs in Berlin point to growing strain between Berlin and Belgrade. Everywhere accent is placed on the alleged tendency of Belgrade to "tolerate" anti-German demonstrations.

The gathering crisis between Germany and Yugoslavia has become considerably more intense and now offers little hope of peaceful settlement, the Wilhelmstrasse announced this afternoon.

So far, it was stated, Yugoslavia has not reached a final decision regarding whether she will honor her adhesion to the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo tripartite alliance.

Informed German quarters openly intimated that if Yugoslavia's new regime repudiates the pact, a full-scale German "blitz" will be "bound to strike."

German spokesmen declared there was little hope of an amicable settlement and placed blame for this on "Serbian chauvinistic elements."

SLAVS APOLOGIZE

This remark constituted Germany's reply to recent anti-German demonstrations in Belgrade and other Yugoslavian centers which resulted in a sharp German diplomatic protest to Belgrade yesterday.

It was revealed the Yugoslavian government already has apologized for an incident in which German Minister Viktor von Heeren was booed in Belgrade when attending church services marking King Peter's accession to the Yugoslavian throne.

TWO ALTERNATIVES

But no matter what happens, German authorities declared, only two alternatives are open to the Yugoslavian government.

The first is unconditional Yugoslavian acknowledgment of its adhesion to the tripartite pact.

The second is an open admission by Belgrade that Yugoslavia is repudiating the pact.

If Yugoslavia adopts the second course, German officials promised, the "blitz" then will be "bound to strike."

An Exchange Telegraph (British) dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, said Chancellor Hitler, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, Marshal Goering and Gen. Keitel considered the situation and decded to give Yugoslavia three days to accept the Axis-Japanese alliance.—Editor's note.

U. S. SEES SLAV MOVES AS KEY TO WAR TREND

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—The United States today watched fast-paced developments in Yugoslavia for the answers to explosive questions vitally affecting the war's threatened sweep into southeastern Europe and Asia.

Diplomatic quarters here, analyzing each move in the Balkan drama, predicted that the whole future course of the conflict, and possible American repercussions as well, would be influenced deeply by what happens to the Nazi-defying Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

President Roosevelt emphasized American interest in the future independence of Yugoslavia in a message congratulating 17-year-old King Peter II on his ascension to the throne.

The President's message to the boy king of "a brave and independent people" followed Acting Secretary of State Welles' pledge of "material assistance" to Yugoslavia—or any nation—which defends itself against aggression.

The President's message, dispatched to King Peter last night, said:

"At this moment, when Your Majesty has assumed the full exercise of your royal rights and powers and the leadership of a brave and independent people, I wish to share with the people of the United States in the expression of our sincere and genuine wishes for the health and well-being of Your Majesty and for the freedom and independence of Yugoslavia.

"Furthermore, I extend the hope that the relations between your government and the government of the United States may be mutually beneficial in the support of those principles of liberty and tolerance so cherished by the Yugoslav and American peoples."

CIO Votes to Continue Allis-Chalmers Strike

By the Associated Press

CIO United Automobile Workers voted in Milwaukee today to continue their strike against the Allis-Chalmers Company "until the government compels the company to accept" a settlement proposed by the office of production management.

The vote was taken at a closed meeting while other employes were back on the job. At the request of the federal government, the huge plant resumed operations yesterday on $45,000,000 of defense orders.

FEW OPPOSED

Announcing the vote, Arthur Richter, union attorney, said there was only a sprinkling of opposition to prolonging the strike. The government had asked the men to return to work while negotiations for a settlement continued.

In Chicago, an official of the International Harvester Co. announced that the company had cancelled its plan to reopen on Monday the Chicago Tractor plant and the plant at Rock Falls, Ill. He said the reason for the decision was lack of union co-operation.

While these developments on the strike front were taking place, a hitch developed in the defense mediation board's plan to hold its first hearing on one of the four labor cases referred to it yesterday. A panel of the board and representatives of the Vanadium Corp. were present, but it was discovered that union officials had not received notice of the meeting in time to be present.

HEARING TOMORROW

William H. Davis, vice chairman of the board, said the hearing would be held tomorrow. The board seeks resumption of operations at the plant pending negotiations for a settlement of the strike called by the CIO steel workers organizing committee.

Scheduled for consideration later today was the case of the AFL Electrical Union and the Cornell Dubilier Corp. at South Plainfield, N. J. Management and union representatives dicussed the issues all night and then asked, unsuccessfully, for postponement of the Washington hearing.

At Chicago, the CIO's farm equipment workers organizing committee demanded certain guarantees from the mediation board before entering any agreement to resume work at four Midwest plants of the International Harvester Co. They emphasized they wanted assurance there would be no discrimination against strikers returning to the plants, which employ 20,000.

A strike at the Midland Steel Products Co., Detroit, important to the automotive industry, was tentatively settled yesterday after 18 uncertain days.

REACH AGREEMENT

CIO and management also reached an agreement affecting 1400 workers at the plant of the Universal Cyclops Steel Corp., Bridgeville, Pa. The five-weeks' strike had been turned over to the mediation board for settlement.

Reopening of the plant, vital to defense, was forecast today. The agreement was said to involve a wage increase.

Resumption of work at Bethlehem's Johnstown, Pa., plant Monday was forecast by a federal labor conciliator. Steel Workers' Organizing Committee members walked out yesterday because of an election by the Employes' Representation Plan, which the CIO calls a company union. The SWOC estimated that 11,000 of the 15,000 workers failed to enter the plant.

At Buffalo, N. Y., the SWOC announced a meeting for Monday between union and management to discuss grievances and pay increase demands of workers at Bethlehem's Lackawanna, N. Y., plant.

525 WORKERS QUIT

At Aliquippa, Pa., the management of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp. reported a brief work halt yesterday when 400 men and 125 girls quit, saying they would not work with non-union men.

A company spokesman said work was resumed when the union leaders were told "intimidation and coercion" would violate a contract.

COAL STRIKE PARLEY

A work stoppage by 330,000 miners in the nation's soft coal industry hinges on labor-management negotiations being pressed this week-end before the current contract expires at midnight Monday.

Snarled for 11 days over a wage clause, representatives of the United Mine Workers of America (CIO) and bituminous operators in the eight-state Appalachian field were agreed that "something should be done this afternoon or tomorow."

A strike at the sprawling Chicago stock yards, concentration point for thousands of animals destined for the meat packing plants, was threatened today by a breakdown in negotiations for a labor contract.

Frank McCarty, district director of the CIO Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee, said that a strike probably would be called early next week.

RAF Pounds Italian Railway in Ethiopia

CAIRO, Egypt, March 29 (AP)—Heavy pounding of track, trains and stations of the vital Addis Ababa-Jibuti railway in Ethiopia, and the Italians' line of retreat to Asmara in Eritrea, was reported by the British air force today.

Three trains were hit and a fourth was set afire between Diredawa and Awash and station buildings at Miesso were left blazing, a communique said. Nearby warehouses also caught fire, it was reported.

U. S. Now Set To Convoy Ships

The program is contained in a report that exhausts the subject of transporting war materials to Britain.

These officials all declined to discus the political eventualities of American convoys for Britain. They insisted that was a question to be decided by the President with its outcome depending on future events, such as what steps Germany will take to sink the convoys.

The important government official, however, pointed out one practical side of the convoy question. He said:

"Our nation, led by the President and Congress, is committed 'all out' aid to Britain. We have specifically promised to provide Britain with ships, tanks, planes, guns, ammunition, all kinds of supplies and food.

"We would be fools to turn these supplies over to Britain at our waterline and watch them go to the bottom of the Atlantic. Hence, some type of American convoying is inevitable."

HALF-WAY ACROSS

From hints dropped, it seems the plan does not include actual convoying of British ships into the war zones. The convoying under consideration appears to be a sort of "protective surveillance," under which U. S. cruisers and destroyers would guard the merchant ships, say half-way across the Atlantic, with British destroyers taking up the convoy duty as the vessels near the waters of the war zone.

Boredom in Shelters Blamed for Vice Surge

LONDON, March 29 (AP)—The Church of England Temperance Society today blamed boredom in air raid shelters for increased drinking among girls and boys.

A report, based on a survey of 150 shelters, said that "where social life is active and the community spirit strong, gambling, drinking and immorality are almost entirely absent."

action and it appears that so far at least one Littorio class battleship has been damaged and that two enemy cruisers are very severely damaged.

"Naval aircraft and units of the Royal Air Force have carried on attacks, the results of which are not known. Greek naval forces are taking part in these operations."

Two British Cruisers Hit, Rome Claims

ROME, March 29 (AP)—The possible sinking of a British cruiser and the damaging of an aircraft carrier and another cruiser in torpedo and bomb attacks by Italy's air force were reported by the high command today.

At the same time Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said that the "naval assault craft" which entered Britain's naval base at Suda bay on the Island of Crete Tuesday night and reputedly sank a warship were tiny, new high-speed vessels requiring skill and daring on the part of their volunteer crews.

SAILORS "HEROIC"

Stefani said the craft were worthy of "the Italian constructive genius and heroic spirit of sailors."

The agency said today that Italian scouting planes had discovered that the warship, reported sunk in yesterday's high command communique, was lying on its side with its decks under water.

The pilots were said to have reported that the 7-mile wide bay was covered with a sheet of fuel oil which extended three miles to sea. They said this indicated one of the British ships "hit and destroyed" in the attack on shipping in the harbor was a tanker loaded with fuel.

ATTACK BRITISH CONVOYS

Today's communique said Italian air forces attacked British convoys, naval formations and an "Aegean harbor."

Several small merchant ships also were said to have been damaged seriously and one of them set afire.

Some of the ships were said to have been attacked in an unidentified "Aegean harbor."

The daily war bulletin said British planes raided the Lecce airfield in the heel of the Italian "boot," machine-gunning installations there and wounding some persons.

HUB GOES SPRING HOME HUNTING

Easy to Buy With Safety

The Diamond Way Home Plan, made popular by the Diamond Match Co., has resulted in hundreds of home lovers now living in a home that satisfies their ideas and desires.

This workable plan for home ownership has been presented as a carefully prepared and complete service by which the entire process of home-building is made simple, secure and satisfactory. The home buyer gets the advantage of all the important details being handled and carried out. Such features as the design of a home, preparation of working drawings and specifications, arranging contracts, supervision of construction, legal work, financing and the supplying of first grade materials—all these come from one point of transaction.

SUPERVISE ALL FEATURES

The Diamond Match Company is not actually a home building organization. It supplies building materials of all kinds to the builders, but from the time the home is started until the owner moves in, this company supervises every feature of construction and installation from ground to roof, including heating and plumbing.

In operation, the service includes furnishing complete working drawings and specifications prepared by a competent architectural staff. The home is designed in co-operation with the home owner, his ideas and desires incorporated into the drawings insofar as is practical and developed so that he will obtain a home suitable to his needs.

ALL HOMES CUSTOM BUILT

More than 50 per cent of the homes are custom-built after prospective home owners have seen models of homes already built. The houses vary in style from early American to Cape Cod design.

The response to this plan has been exceedingly strong, far surpassing the expected results and it certainly indicates its value to the communities where these homes are built. In addition to single homes built for individual purchasers, the Diamond Match Co. is also promoting the development of these selected locations in the Greater Boston area. These developments include Aberdeen Village, Hingham; Cumberland Acres, Lynn; Westwood Park Estates, Westwood; and Lexington Ridge, Lexington.

Next week, Jacob's Lake.

Spring is almost here, but summer plans are now being made for real estate appraisal courses to be held at Columbia University, from June 2-28. The Boston Real Estate Exchnge offices have complete information.

AMONG RECENT SALES

The Home for Aged Couples, a Massachusetts charitable corporation, has sold to Alan J. Morley of Boston a peninsula of 20 acres of land known as "Angleside," on the Waltham-Weston line and bordering the Charles river. The property carries an assessment of $16,000 and was bought for investment and development. Benjamin C. Tower represented the seller and the Howe Associates represented the purchaser.

AMONG RECENT LEASES

The National Shawmut Bank leased offices at 82 Devonshire st. to Mutual Savings Central Fund, Inc., and Charles A. Collins has leased an office in the same building. The Suffolk Savings Bank for Seamen has leased to San-Hyja Co. 6000 square feet of street floor space in 96-100 Cummington st., Boston. The Ames Real Estate Trust has leased an office at 100 Boylston st. to Barry's Dental Laboratory. All these transactions were negotiated through the office of C. W. Whittier & Bro.

Open House May 10 At Bradley Woods

With the date having been set as May 10 for a houseful of furniture to be given away to some lucky persons, Bradley Woods in Hingham should have capacity crowds until that date. Every person who visits this development, receives a ticket which entitles him or her to a chance in the drawing for the furniture.

The trees will be out, the drives will be finished, and Bradley Woods, "midway between work and play," will then be the answer to the dreams of many home seekers. Even now lookers are becoming buyers and there will soon be less than the 100 "Registered Homes" at Bradley Woods, Hingham.

Hub Policeman Badly Beaten by Prisoner

Patrolman Joseph Conlon, 43, of the Roxbury Crossing station sustained internal injuries today when he was beaten and kicked by a man he had taken prisoner.

He had picked up a suspect for routine questioning and was holding him at a police box, waiting for a patrol wagon, when the prisoner suddenly broke loose. The man struck Conlon about the head, kicked him in the stomach, then fled.

Home Buyers Advised To Keep Open Minds

Enough emphasis cannot be placed on the fact that the prospective home builder should maintain an open mind on every point during the course of the planning of the house, FHA officials say.

1000 FHA Homes, Plan

The low cost FHA bungalow that you have been reading about in these papers has at last become a reality with the K. V. Wolsey Co., 200 West st., Hyde Park, announcing plans for the construction of 1000 FHA houses known as "America's No. 1 Home," during the coming year.

"America's No. 1 Home" will have plastered walls and ceilings, oak floors, insulation, a full cellar, automatic oil heat, solid concrete foundation, modern cabinet kitchen with an insulated gas range, complete bath with shower and recessed tub, steel casement windows, complete with screens, and numerous other quality features.

This house will sell for only $3333, for house, land and everything because of mass production and the endless advantage of quantity buying. The payments will be as low as $24 to $28 a month, for principal, interest, taxes, fire insurance and FHA mortgage.

K. V. Wolsey Co. will build this home in many localities in Massachusetts, including Hyde Park, at the Hazelwood development in Hyde Park and the Weymouth and Braintree developments on Walnut ave., one-quarter of a mile from Weymouth Landing.

The model home is shown only at 200 West st., Hyde Park, any day or evening.

John C. Kiley Sales Hurry Liquidation

The remaining parcels of residential property owned by the Wakefield Real Estate and Building Ass'n have been sold by John C. Kiley. The association, in the process of liquidation, recently disposed of three blocks of stores and several houses through Mr. Kiley.

During the past week, Mr. Kiley sold at public auction for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co. 40,000 sq. ft. of land at 236 Chestnut ave., Jamaica Plain, to Madeline Orfevre.

AIR FREQUENCY NUMBERS ARE SHIFTED BY STATIONS

Radio set owners in New England, as well as in the nation, had to learn the numbers of their favorite stations all over again today, for while they slept the frequency numbers of radio stations were changed.

But for the radio repairman, a booming business was expected, for automatic tuning receivers will have to be realigned.

With the exception of WEEI which remained at 590 kilocycles, all Boston stations shifted on the dial with changes in frequency varying from 20 to 40 kilocycles.

The change-over, achieved by radio stations after regular broadcasting had been signed off, was decided upon at the North American Radio conference at Havana, Cuba, Nov. 1, in 1937, in the interest of better radio reception.

It will remain in effect for five years, with Mexico, Canada, Cuba and the United States the participating nations.

The frequency shift not only meant that all automatic tuning sets must be readjusted, but that manual receivers in some cases may have been taken out of alignment.

Here is how the change affected Boston stations: WEEI, remains at 590 kilocycles; WHDH, shifted from 830 to 850; WORL, from 920 to 950; WBZ, from 990 to 1030; WCOP, from 1120 to 1150; WNAC, from 1230 to 1260; WAAB, from 1410 to 1440; and WMEX, from 1470 to 1510.

'Your Figure, Madame' Will Begin Monday

Facts about milady's figure and the attainment of streamlined perfection, without undergoing the dangerous rigors of fasting, are now made available to women readers of the Boston American.

Ida Jean Kain, noted authority on problems of dieting and its application to physical fitness, will write a series of articles beginning next Monday, March 31, under the column caption of "Your Figure, Madame."

WAY TO CHARM

And here is the best news of all; she will tell her feminine readers how they may acquire "A New Figure for Spring."

Hardly believable, you say? Just wait until you have all the figure facts placed before you by one of America's foremost dietitians.

This famous feminist columnist and dietitian is fully qualified by research and practical experience to discuss the vital principles which govern the acquiring of a charming figure, without surrendering any of the three square meals a day.

Miss Kain's articles will point the way to perfect health and figure charm, with freedom from the dangers that lurk in sensational and unsound reducing diets.

SECRET OF NUTRITION

Both the modern Miss and the modern Madame have a genuine desire to learn the facts, and Miss Kain will provide them in a sympathetic and understanding manner.

The whole secret lies in a proper knowledge of the correct nutrition rules, combined with a guide to physical perfection.

Don't forget. The first of Miss Kain's series, "A New Figure for Spring," exclusively in next Monday's Boston Evening American.

Doctor Slayer Hunt Narrowed

vestigators was that the couple's Collie dog apparently made no violent disturbance during the period that his mistress was beaten to death. Blood was found on the animal, it was said.

In his story to police, Dr. Joss said he had carried his wife's body upstairs after he found her on returning from a nearby store, and given her an injection with a hypodermic injection. He then called the town's only other physician.

The early hunt for a "bearded stranger" resulted in picking up of three wanderers in nearby communities, but all were released after they had told plausible stories.

Meanwhile, Deputy Supt. of State Police Lawrence Upton asked police at Birmingham, Ala., to check up on the background of the couple there to see if they had enemies prior to coming here about five years ago.

Mrs. Joss was graduated from Peabody College at Nashville, Tenn., and interned at Bellevue Hospital in New York. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harris of Jackson, Ala., and is survived by two brothers and two sisters. Members of the family were en route here today to complete funeral arrangements.

He Holds Breath 16 Min. and 20 Sec. For World Mark

MIDDLETOWN, Ct., March 29 (AP)—Prof. Edward C. Schneider of Wesleyan University claimed an unofficial world's record today for one of his students in a "breath-taking" experiment.

He reported that J. Edward Burns, a graduate student studying respiration, had held his breath for 16 minutes, 20 seconds, exceeding by two minutes and 18 seconds the official record now held, he said, by a person named Gaylord, who lives "around Boston way."

Burns, who weighs 180 pounds and tops six feet, first breathed himself almost to dizziness to wash his blood of carbon dioxide. Then he took three breaths of pure oxygen—and held.

Even Horses Rebel

Old Favorites In Wagner Roles

By LEO GAFFNEY

It is the disposition of the superior person called the Accomplished Musician to look down the nose at "Tannhauser."

The immature Richard Wagner is too much—or rather not enough—for him. He knows about "Die Meistersinger" and "Tristan" and the Ring cycle. And so he must be sure to disparage the earlier "Tannhauser," lest you think his taste common and he is not up on the Finer Things.

"Tannhauser" was given last night at the Metropolitan, presumably for the less effete, who, though they might not be able to tell a leit motif from a hand organ, have at least a reliable sense that guides them to the comfortable middle ground somewhere between the Prison Scene of "Trovatore" and the Immolation Scene of "Gotterdaemmerung."

* * *

For such the performance was a rich reward. The others don't count; they weren't there anyway. So it was possible to pitch right in and enjoy everything.

There was the deep sounding overture—never mind the claptrap parts—which melt so nicely into the Venusberg; the lush singing of Kerstin Thorborg vamping the wig off Lauritz Melchior, who just walks out on her because he's weary of "the soft chains of shame"; the booming basso of Emmanuel List; the thrilling sweetness of Julius Huehn's noble baritone saluting the Evening Star; the precise singing of Lotte Lehman, as Elizabeth, and the steadfast beauty of her tone under the stress of "Dich Theure Halle" and the Prayer Scene—and the terrific competition of all those men in the Second Act Finale.

* * *

As for the stout-hearted men, where in all opera do they get such a chance to stand up and sing together, and in such noble ensembles? After last night, who would part with the Pilgrim's Chorus, the Second Act Finale and the rousing triumph of the finish?

Take it all in all, it was a precious "Tannhauser," particularly vocally, and under the baton of Leonsdorf—though you can't say much for the poor old scenery.

Times are tight, however, and you can't have everything.

Most fetching daily double yet offered by the Old Howard are those popular cutie cuticles, Marian Miller and Roxanne, both established favorites on the burlesque travelling circuit and the latter a particular Boston pet.

MARIAN MILLER
Returns to Old Howard Monday

They head the new burlesque revue, starting Monday, and are amply assisted by such dependable funsters as Charles Kemper, Dick Richards and George Hagerty.

Then there are such razzle-dazzlers as Jean Lee, Carol King, Beth Calvert and Joan Randal.

The Five Canastrellys are novel acrobatic wonders, prominently featured in the 1940 World's Fair. Other vaudevillians are Paula and Ernestine, Jess Jack, Corinne Kimball, Jack Curtis, Benson Brothers and many more. In addition there is a chorus of 30 "Speed Darlings," offering something new and diverting in the way of song-and-dance numbers.

On the screen next week you'll be seeing "Raffles," with David Niven (now in the British army), and Olivia De Havilland, and "City in Darkness," co-starring Sidney Toler and Lynn Barl, as well as the regular shorts and newsreels.

The Old Howard's three daily shows start at 12 m., 2:45 and 8:30 p. m. There is a Friday midnight show, starting at 11:30.

EUGENIA WILSON, who plays Pearl, child wife, in "Tobacco Road," which returns to the Plymouth Apr. 14.

IT'S "THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS," due at the Plymouth a week from Monday night, and it appears that a toast is in order. Phyllis Brooks, recently here in "Panama Hattie," and Forrest Orr are the parties of the first and second part. The new comedy is from the pens of Laura and S. J. Perelman and is being produced by Courtney Burr.

GRACIE WORTH of the enduring and delightful "Blossom Time," 20-year-old operetta at the Shubert.

'The Night Before Christmas' Opens Monday at Plymouth

When Laura and S. J. Perelman penned their latest comedy, "The Night Before Christmas," which will be shown at the Plymouth Theatre Monday evening, it was Courtney Burr, entrepreneur and bon vivant who promptly took possession of the script and set about the business of production.

This is as it should be, for it was the same Mr. Burr who presented the Perelmans' first play, "All Good Americans."

"The Night Before Christmas," Mr. and Mrs. Perelman's second play, has to do with a hilarious holiday crime and its by-products. A Mr. Faunce, fatuous, self important and given to robbery, buys a Sixth ave. luggage shop, not because he has any interest in the retail trunk and traveling case business, but because the cellar of the place adjoins the vault of the Broadway Mutual Bank.

With the aid of one Ruby, a dim-witted muscle man, and a pretty young "moll" named Dennie, he plans to tunnel through to the stored wealth and then retire to the Roney-Plaza in Miami for a fling at cheating the suckers at Hialeah. The complications and setbacks he encounters on his road to easy living, lead to a gay and highly entertaining evening in the theater.

Phyllis Brooks, Ruth Weston, Forrest Orr and George Matthews are the featured players and the others include Louis Sorin, John Ravold, Owen Martin, Harry Bratslurg and William David.

Star at Globe

Beauties and buffoons are running a neck-and-neck race for popularity honors this week at the Globe, where Jean Carroll reigns in the eye-appeal department and Charles "Red" Marshall is topping all his hilariously comic past performances.

"Queen" Carroll is surrounded by a court of lovelies including Melanie LaBeau, Divinity Duval and Dolores Dawn.

But though beauty is in the ascendant, there is a rumor 'round town that a mugg named "Red" Marshall is the four-star attraction at the Globe this week.

'Hudson's Bay' on Bowdoin Program

The Bowdoin's weekend attraction is the Paul Muni-starring saga of the fur country, "Hudson's Bay," which boasts some spectacular sequences showing London and Canada.

Gene Tierney, young and lovely Broadway find currently appearing on another local screen, is featured, as are the towering Laird Cregar, John Sutton, Vincent Price, Virginia Field, Nigel Bruce and Montagu Love.

The second feature, "The Face Behind the Mask," is a Peter-Lorre starring thriller

A BRIDE'S PLACE is in the home . . at least that's what the many young friends of Elizabeth Hollis think, judging by the number of household showers they have given preceding her wedding this afternoon to Miller Deane Richmond . . .

All sorts of gadgets to make housekeeping a cheerful and easy task each day of the week have been given to the pretty bride who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hollis of Hingham . . .

The four o'clock ceremony is taking place in the historic Old Ship Church with a reception at the South Shore Country Club, and since both the bride and bridegroom are members of old Hingham families the wedding guests will include practically everyone of social prominence along the South Shore . . .

Walking down the aisle with her father, the bride is wearing a lovely gown of white satin made with a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and a flared skirt with a train . . . Her veil of illusion net falls from a cluster of orange blossoms and she is carrying white sweetheart roses and white orchids . . .

* * *

Couple Will Live in Hingham

IT'S AN ALL WHITE WEDDING with a profusion of white snapdragon, Easter lilies and single stock decorating the church, and spring flowers forming a background for the receiving line at the club . . .

The maid of honor and four bridesmaids are wearing gowns of white crepe with bodices of mousseline de soie and their lovely headdresses of lavender iris and peach sweet peas match the lacey bouquets they are carrying . . . The attendants are Mary Hastings of Beacon street and Hingham, maid of honor; Mrs. Frank Hall, Mrs. George Wightman, Mrs. Ellerton Whitney and Mrs. Martin Donahoe (Jane Bogardus) as bridesmaids . . .

The newlyweds are going to Florida for their honeymoon and will live in Hingham . . . Outstanding among the many pre-wedding parties was a large dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hastings at their Beacon street home . . . Dinner was served at a U-shaped table decorated with spring flowers and bridal favors . . .

Marian Wood Weds in Brookline

THE FIRST PARISH CHURCH in Brookline is the setting for another picturesque four o'clock wedding today when Marian Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orrin G. Wood of Brookline becomes the bride of John Wyllys Baird of Chicago . . .

Marian, a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club, is a graduate of Miss Porter's School and Smith College '38 . . . Her bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Warner Green Baird of the Windy City . . . He attended the Institute Sellia in Switzerland and graduated from Wesleyan in 1933 and from Harvard Business School . . .

Rev. Abbott Peterson is performing the ceremony before an altar banked with pink Briarcliffe roses, and the reception is taking place at the Wood residence on Warren street . . .

Sister Serves as Maid of Honor

Alice Grout Wood, sister of the bride, is serving as maid of honor and the bridesmaids are the Misses Olive and Katharine Baird, sisters of the bridegroom; Polly Faulkner, cousin of the bride, Mary Holt of Portland, Me., Julia Camp, Washington, D. C., Jean Ann Gray, Richmond, Va., Mary Laverack, Brookline, and Mrs. H. Holton Wood, sister-in-law of the bride, of Brookline . . .

The attendants' gowns are of hyasinth blue marquisette with which they are wearing flower hats of fresh pink roses to match their bouquets . . . Mrs. Wood is receiving in a gown of dusty pink crepe Roma with a green straw picture hat trimmed with pink roses, and Mrs. Baird has chosen a light blue gown with cinnamon brown accessories . . .

Deb in Smart Opera Throng

Smith Grads To Hold Tea

Mrs. Robert Cushman of Mt. Vernon st. will be hostess at a spring tea for members of the Boston Smith College Club next Tuesday afternoon from 3.30 to six.

Mrs. Cushman and Mrs. Osborne Earle, president of the club, have also invited Smith College undergraduates, now home for spring vacation, to attend the party.

Miss Charlotte Bassett,, vice-president, will be in charge of the bevy of pourers who include Mrs. Henry B. Sawyer, Mrs. Frederic Tudor, Mrs. George N. Proctor, Mrs. John E. Yerxa, Mrs. Charles P. Howard, Mrs. Harris J. Nelson, Mrs. Courtney C. Smith and Miss Mabel H. Cummings.

Many Bostonians In Virginia

Missing from her usual box seats at the opera this year is Mrs. Francis P. Sears of Mt. Vernon st., one of Boston's most faithful patrons of music. She is vacationing at Hot Springs, Va., where other New England names on the Homestead register include Mrs. Ingalls Sard of Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. F. Murray Forbes of Wellesley, C. Stewart Forbes, Miss Mary H. Mooney, Miss Florence E. Walkins of Boston, Mrs. Frederick S. Mead and Mrs. Arthur Perrin of Brookline, Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bacon of Jamaica Plain and Miss B. M. Wakefield of Worcester.

Novel Ideas Make Parties

"LID'S OFF" PARTY LETS OUT THE SECRET

What a splash you can make giving such parties—for showers, birthdays and anniversaries, too—when you have on hand clever new ideas for entertainment.

The special trick of the "Lid's Off' party is one you can easily manage yourself—with ordinary half-pint ice-cream cartons!

Put in each a heart-shaped card saying "Lid's Off! John and Ann!" Then, using flowered paper and gauzy bows, fix up some of the cartons to look like Frenchy hatboxes. Those are for the women guests. For the men's boxes use plain bright paper, smart ribbons and hunting scenes cut from magazines.

Put a box, tagged with the guest's name, at each place and for your centerpiece have a garden hat filled with flowers. Now all's set for the surprise—the opening of the boxes, the reading of the news!

These any many other clever parties you'll find described in our 40-page booklet, Showers, Announcements and Anniversaries.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, Showers, Announcements and Anniversaries, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th st., New York, N. Y.

Market Day

Novel Benefit For School

Horticultural Hall will be transformed into a corner of old London next Thursday for the unique Caledonian Market to be staged for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture in Groton.

Mrs. John H. Cunningham of Brookline is directing the affair with the able assistance of Mrs. John Gardner Coolidge, president of the school's board of trustees.

True to London's world-famed Caledonian Market, where every manner of thing from glistening blocks of salt to diamond tiaras may be found for sale, the Boston version will feature a wide variety of articles being donated for the fund. Even now Mrs. Coolidge's Commonwealth ave. home which she has offered as a clearing house for contributions, is bursting with a gay assortment of everything from mink stoles to tapestry chairs.

Mrs. Edward Cunningham of Dedham has contributed a generous collection of souvenirs from China. Miss Mabel Choate has sent a selection of smart handbags and valuable medals. A supply of evening gowns has been contributed by Mrs. John Higgins of Worcester; hats and jewelry from Mrs. Henry W. Harris of Chestnut Hill, and a large display of china has come from Mrs. Edward Dodge of Cambridge.

Cooking

Try Chopped Meat

By MARTHA LEE

"Chop-chop" may indicate oriental speed; it's also the American homemaker's way to flavor and economy when she says it to her meat dealer.

Chopping turns the thrifty meat cuts into mouth-melting morsels, for it divides the connective tissues in the meat and makes it more tender; chopping brings out hidden flavor, adds variety to menus.

Chopped meat is a quick-cooker; furthermore, lets you use up all kinds of meat. Chopped meat cookery is as varied as March weather. Hamburgers, naturally! Meat loaf, of course. Order your meat ground; have it "put through" once or twice to suit your purposes!

CHILI CASSEROLE

2 tbsp. bacon fat
1 onion, minced
1 clove garlic, peeled
1½ lbs. chopped beef
2 cups cooked kidney beans
1 tsp. salt
Pepper
½ tsp. chili powder
2½ cups cooked tomatoes
½ cup grated cheese

Melt bacon fat in heavy frying pan. Add chopped onion and garlic; cook 3 minutes. Remove garlic, add meat and cook 2 minutes. Add kidney beans, seasonings and tomatoes; mix well. Put in greased 1½ quart casserole, sprinkle with cheese, and bake in moderate oven (375 deg. F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

SWEDISH MEAT BALLS

2 cups soft bread crumbs
¾ cup milk
2 tbsp. minced onion
¼ cup butter
1 lb. chopped beef
¾ tsp. nutmeg
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
1 egg, beaten
2 tbsp. flour
½ cup rich milk or thin cream

Soak bread crumbs in milk 10 minutes. Saute onion in half the butter until lightly browned. Add to meat with seasonings and slightly beaten egg. Add soaked bread crumbs and put mixture through meat grinder. Form in small balls and saute in frying pan in remaining butter until light brown on all sides. Sprinkle with flour, coating each ball well. Cover and cook 5 minutes. Add milk or thin cream, cover and cook 5 minutes longer. Makes 16 to 18 balls.

SWEET POTATO ROLY POLY

¾ lb. ground ham
½ lb. ground pork
½ cup cracker crumbs
1 egg
¾ cup milk
Pepper
2 cups mashed sweet potatoes

Combine all ingredients except potatoes. Spread on waxed paper to ½ inch thickness, making a rectangle about 6x10 inches. Spread with seasoned potatoes and roll as for jelly roll. Place in dripping pan and bake 1½ hours in moderate oven (350 deg. F.). Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MOCK DRUMSTICKS

1 cup soft bread crumbs
¾ cup milk
2 tbsp. bacon fat
2 tbsp. minced onion
2 tbsp. minced green pepper
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. celery salt
1 lb. chopped veal
Flour
¾ cup water

Soak bread crumbs in milk 10 minutes. Melt 1 tbsp. bacon fat in heavy frying pan, add onion and green pepper; cook 3 minutes. Add salt, pepper, celery salt, onion and green pepper to meat; blend well. Add soaked bread crumbs and mix thoroughly. Form into 4 or 6 drumsticks; roll in flour. Cook in remaining bacon fat until light brown on all sides. Add water; cover, and simmer 30 minutes. Insert 4-inch stick uncooked macaroni into each drumstick. Garnish with strips of broiled bacon.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

IT'S GETTING around spring house-cleaning time and the voice of the vacuum cleaner will shortly be heard in the land. So as one who has known nigh onto half a century of house-cleaning, I'm going to arise and deliver a sermon.

It won't be an eloquent sermon. But it will be as practical and poignant as a corn cure. It will answer a screeching need in every human soul who reads it. And it will be directed to every woman and to any man who has the chin to take it. The text is:

YOU DON'T HAVE TO DO IT ALL IN ONE DAY, SISTER!

If you've never been a real conscientious spring house-cleaner, you may not get the slant of that. But if you're an average mortal who has to sleep in the garage and tries to chew on a spark plug while the Missus has every darn room in the house torn up at the same time, you'll understand that text pronto —and be both enthusiastic and grateful.

IT'S THE NATURE of the female sex—of which I am one—to want to do everything at one time.

There is no particular reason why house-cleaning should be finished in a couple of days. There are at least 200 other days of the year when our hardest duty is to rub cold cream into our necks and wreck the neighbor's reputation. But, come the Ides of March, and we just can't wait.

With the first cackle of the bluebird a perfect frenzy seizes us. Forthwith the Howling Dervish has nothing on Friend Wife. It must all be done—and it must all be done at the same time. The whole family, to be sure, has been perfectly content with the good old grime for the past six months and is equally willing to wallow along with it for another month or so. But no! Off it must come! For

Nor is this peculiar frenzy confined to house-keeping. Did you ever see one of Us Girls bit with a Reform Wave and decide forthwith to clean up everything in sight? Now there's Brother Ben and that lazy Aunt Eliza, to say nothing of those impudent young sprouts, Sister and Junior, not to mention Dad, whose sins are multiple.

There they've gone on for years and years, accumulating mortal sin and multiple errors, with all the irritating consequences thereof.

Yet, somehow, they've gotten along. They've fallen in love, married and had babies. They've gotten jobs and managed to hold them.

But suddenly the Dear Little Woman decides that this has all been wrong. Her particular pain in the neck may not be a family problem but a Civic Situation. Anyhow, whatever it is, she's going to get busy and mop it up—right now! And ends by having everybody wishing they could commit "mass murder."

All of which, I humbly submit, is The Bunk, Girls. And is the main reason why we are, increasingly, The Avoided Sex. It's one thing to be good and earnest and anxious to Do Right By Your Soul, but you don't have to try and do it all in one day.

It took that old house quite a lot of living to accumulate its coat of grime. Then why not take it off bit by bit, without blotting off family life during the purge.

Should She Ask Escort In?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm in my third year high school, and we have many dances and parties, which I usually attend with a boy friend. I've often wondered whether I ought to ask these boys in when they escort me home. I usually say good night at the door, but my girl chum she asks her partner to come in a while. I would like you to tell me, please, who is correct. DOT.

If it is late, say 12 or 1 o'clock, it's better form for a high school girl to bid her escort goodnight at the door. Sometimes a girl gives a supplementary party, and invites a group to come to her house for hot chocolate or fruit punch, but this is not done in the case of a solitary young man. It would be well to get your mother's reaction to such an invitation.

You Can Be Beautiful

'Mould Your Face' Kit Contains Many Essentials

By ARLINE GOULD

WE HATE to confirm your worst suspicions this way . . . your suspicion that age is having its way with your complexion, and the results are becoming evident . . . but there's a complexion authority lecturing here who says, "there's a new type of woman creeping up in our midst . . . I refer to the 'withering woman'. Her soul is white . . . her heart is pure and she is kind to her loved ones . . . but, oh, how she maltreats her own contour!

"Sagging lines, drooping muscles, a scrawny neck, unwelcome jowls . . . these are the indictments against the 'withering woman,'" insists she.

Is she merely talking, and pointing out a harsh fact just to hurt your feelings? No. She offers you a solution. It's a mould-your-face box.

It's more than a box filled with rarely good and unusual things . . . it carries with it a chart, giving the famous massage tricks used in her Fifth Avenue salon . . . massage tricks you may employ on yourself . . . to get a new contour line from a puckered forehead to a sagging chin and flabby throat!

It's astounding . . . that this four-essential kit is only $3.50 . . . when you consider the rejuvenating aids in it. There's a soapless liquid lather and brush for your skin, to keep it pliant and all the old winter-worn cuticle peeled away to show the young, unmarred skin beneath. There's a plastic cream . . . a masque to use faithfully twice a week . . . astringent . . . powder, rouge and lipstick!

But perhaps the most revolutionary, revealing thing is the chart which gives contour-building knuckle-massage, pinch massage and three contour-lifting exercises. As we said, the buy-of-the-spring for $3.50!

If you'd like shopping information on this "mould your face" kit, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

BABY JOHN'S picture will interest all readers, married readers especially.

Baby John is a sound, healthy little man—the kind of infant son every hopeful parent dreams about.

You may carefully examine his tiny body, and you will never find any blight or blemish attributable to the social diseases that have afflicted babies from the dawn of civilization.

RIGHT KIND OF CHILD
His Parents Are Healthy; He Benefits.

Not all babies are so fortunate.

Each year thousands are born with tainted blood and a heritage of idiocy, imbecility and lifelong inferiority.

That is why twenty States, including New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, have adopted laws requiring men and women contemplating marriage to submit to blood tests.

Wise law-makers realize that a diseased human being, like a diseased tree, can seldom produce good fruit; that congenital germs in the veins of a father or mother usually mean a transmission of those same germs to the veins of a child.

For years Massachusetts has been a backward State in this respect.

We have permitted almost anyone to marry, even those who have been branded as unfit in other States.

We have paid little or no attention to the warnings of distinguished agencies like the American Social Hygiene Association which says:

"Annually at least sixty thousand American babies are born to die or to live handicapped because of syphilis; another twenty-five thousand are born dead.

"Fully 15 per cent of all blindness can be traced to the ravages of syphilis, and more than 10 per cent of all mental disease is the result of that illness."

There is however a ray of hope in our otherwise dark sky.

Representative Leslie B. Cutler's bill providing for pre-marital physical examinations has been approved by the Legislature's Committee on Public Health.

Twelve of the committee members voted favorably on the measure; only three opposed it.

If the House, Senate and Governor Saltonstall show the same intelligent regard for the well-being of tomorrow's generation, Massachusetts can expect a big increase in the number of Baby Johns and an equally large decrease in the other kind of infant—the kind that is doomed to spend its life in an institution or insane asylum.

"GRAND OPERA went democratic in a big way Thursday night, when Mozart's 'Marriage of Figaro' moved into a movie house, and the old Boston Opera House sulked in darkness, inhabited only by ghosts of a more gala day."

So wrote a girl reporter with an eye for facts and an ability to express them.

She also said:

"In many ways it was one of the most brilliant openings in years, yet it definitely was not dominated by 'old Boston.' Dowagers were in the minority, and tiaras were few and far between."

Our curious scribe's impressions were confirmed when she mingled with the throng and overheard an ermine-clad "deb" explaining to a friend:

"Grandmother wanted to hear it, but she just couldn't bring herself to come to a movie theater."

If the reporter required more confirmation she obtained it a few minutes later when she observed an elderly grande dame forcing her weary way through the packed lobby and muttering:

"There's practically nobody here."

In spite of this snobbery the opera will endure, and, unless we miss our guess, the current offering will delight the largest number of paying customers in Boston history.

Now, having abandoned one tradition, we may as a city be prepared to get rid of others.

We may courageously wake up and face the fact that streets designed for plodding oxen will hardly do for automobiles.

We may even imitate enterprising New York City, which is taking the kinks out of its long-cherished Central Park road, and give over a part of our own Common to vehicular traffic.

DR. SAUERBRUCK, Hitler's doctor, is in Paris treating Herman Goering, who is ill. Reports from authoritative sources indicate what Herr Goering is suffering from is something trivial. The United States is in the war or at least, nearly in, and is preparing for it." That's what Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones told the Banking Committee of the House of Representatives. The dispatch doesn't state that the Banking Committee replied to Mr. Jones by rising as one man and saying: "You're telling us!" But such action would have been most appropriate.

PLEASE NOTE: "Do you ever have fish for breakfast?" asks a Milwaukee subscriber. Now and then, sir, I have codfish cakes. And very tasty they are if I may say so. I know a fellow who eats fish three times a day, every day. By choice, too . . . Are you a handy man around the house? If you're not let's shake hands. I can't even hang a picture or open a can of succotash without wounding myself. I heard of a man, however, who is so handy at making housekeeping gadgets and suggesting ways of doing housework that he has enabled his wife to do her work in one-third the time she previously gave to it. Looks as if this fellow is a cinch for the title of "What A Man No. 1." He should become a household efficiency expert. Husbands could then engage him to teach their wives to do the housework efficiently. Using efficient methods, most housewives could have their work done with half the time and energy they now spend on it.

CONFIDENTIAL: A film company announces it will produce nine war pictures. That's too many war pictures. Right now people prefer plays or pictures packing plenty of laughs. Fact that the ancient farce, "Charley's Aunt," is a sensational hit on Broadway seems to prove this . . . Have recently heard of girl named Vivian who streamlined her name to Cycyan and one christened Gladys who streamlined it to Gwladys . . . "It was Virginia Verrill who sang 'That Old Feeling' in the Vogues of 1938," a New Yorker informs me. Thanks, Ma'am I must get a record of that. In that picture, I believe, Virginia also sang "To Think I Used to Be the Belle of New Orleans." I hope I can get a record of that, too. After I get my ranch, my two-year-old racehorse and a mink coat for my girl friend I am going to get one of those record machines that play twenty-six records without stopping.

PASSING BY: Theodore Dreiser. Greatest living American novelist. That's my story, anyhow. He had a tough time in his youth. Even after writing "Sister Carrie" he nearly starved to death. He lived in Brooklyn and every day, from necessity, walked over the Brooklyn bridge to New York. And boy, when with carfare at a nickel you walk over that bridge in the Winter you are really broke. Dreiser was 54 years old when he wrote "An American Tragedy" . . . Binnie Barnes. Film performer. She is one of a family of 16 children. What a Christmas present list she must have.

-:- MY DAY

TUSKEGEE, ALABAMA, Friday—Yesterday morning we drove around the grounds of the Georgia State Woman's College, where the students certainly have every opportunity for a healthy and happy outdoor life.

I wish very much that I had more opportunity to talk with the faculty. They seemed young and progressive. When we finally ended up at the library, which was being dedicated, I felt that one could be justly enthusiastic about the opportunities ofered here to girls for a rounded education.

I was told there was a great difference between the size of the freshman class and the number of graduates, for a good many girls leave to get married. Because the Georgia law allows girls to teach after two years of college, those facing economic difficulties go to earn a living.

FROM THE WAY people talk, I get the impression occasionally that it is not considered important for girls to be really well educated, if they are going to marry and bring up a family.

I would like to register here my thought that marriage and the upbringing of children in the home, require as well trained a mind and as well disciplined a character as any other occupation that might be considered a career.

I think we ought to impress on both our girls and boys that successful marriages require just as much work, just as much intelligence and just as much unselfish devotion, as they give to any position they undertake to fill on a paid basis.

The principles of democratic citizenship are taught in the home and the example is given there of the responsibility assured to the individual under a democratic form of government. Every man and woman's college should have that objective in view as part of the educational process. Without it no education is complete.

We left Valdosta, Ga., about 11 o'clock and drove through a sudden heavy rainstorm on the way to Albany, Ga. Just at its height, one of my tires went flat.

Luckily ,another car was with us and we drove with Mr. Horace Caldwell, leaving our two chauffeurs to change the tire when the rain stopped and then to follow us. After a very pleasant lunch given by the Rotarians, we proceeded to Tuskegee, where we arrived about 5 o'clock.

This is a very fine institution which has always interested me very much . Since I am here to attend the Rosenwald Fund meeting, I expect to learn a great deal.

She lived on the left bank in Paris in a house where Mary Garden, the opera star, also was a tenant. On the day the Nazis arrived, while a pall of smoke descended upon the left bank, she saw Mary Garden, wearing a chic hat and gown, sitting on a straight back chair in the center of the open doorway . . . The other mystery of the week—Jan Valtin's unannounced Mutual broadcast from Washington—was preceded by an unusual stir in Washington. A Washington dispatch read "the plans for the broadcast became known, despite ardent attempts of WOL and Mutual officials to keep it as quiet as possible" and that the tip-off resulted in a visit to the studio by a Department of Justice functionary, as well as a cancellation of the plan to have Valtin interviewed by Walter Compton, the Presidential announcer. The dispatch added "the plans for the broadcast were tipped off by an item in Leonard Lyons' Broadway column" . . . BOSTON After DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

MORTON DOWNEY'S DEBUT at the Mayfair will take place April 16, the Wednesday after Easter Sunday . . . The annual late Lenten doldrums, meantime, are anticipated along the Rialto . . . Worcester was wondering last night whether this annual slack period had arrived prematurely.

OTHER EXPLANATIONS were lacking in attempting to "alibi" for the sparse turnout of customers which greeted the highly-publicized Horace Heidt (and his orchestra) at the beautiful Worcester Auditorium . . . Not more than 1500 persons were attracted by the visiting Heidts . . . Double that number were expected.

ALSO PREMATURE, PERHAPS, WAS this column's speculation yesterday as to the whyfor of an apparent capture by a rival concern of the Boston territory so faithfully pioneered by Jim Roosevelt's new motion picture box, known as "soundies" . . . It seems that several "soundies" have been scattered around Greater Boston, and that one of the Roosevelt-Mills machines has been installed at the Casa Manana, which is not too far from downtown Boston.

OTHERS ARE BEING OPERATED at the Halfway House, in West Roxbury, and a place known as the Pompeii Cafe . . . The Roosevelt super "juke box" is not on display in downtown Boston only because the motor of the machine is set for alternating current, and downtown Boston requires direct current

WE WERE NOT TOO FAR AFIELD, though, in commenting that "somebody seems to have stolen a march on Jimmy Roosevelt" . . . Captain (of the Marines) Jimmy and his associates have manufactured their miniature motion-picture machines to sell at a cost of $700 . . . This is $110 more that the cost of the rival "phon-o-vision" . .

JIMMY'S MACHINE, MOREOVER, REQUIRES the voltage of a dime to set its whirring wheels in motion . . . The rival company has put forth a nickel-in-the-slot machine.

"WATCH ON THE RHINE" is the title of Lillian Hellman's new play, and critics who saw it in Baltimore at its opening Monday are hailing it as the first successful "anti-Nazi play" . . . If they are right, this makes three hits in a row for Miss Hellman . . . "The Children's Hour," and "The Little Foxes" were her earlier notable contributions to the drama.

JOHN LODGE HAS AN IMPORTANT role in "Watch on the Rhine," and a rumble was heard last night that John's presence in the cast might induce the play's producer to bring it to Boston before New York . . . But there's an "if— . . ." . . . It depends on whether the new opus, after two week's playing, needs a longer tryout period.

INDICATIONS NOW ARE that Miss Hellman has done her customarily succinct job of writing, and that Herman Shumlin's sharp direction helps to make the piece able to withstand the New York "death watch"—as the phalanx of metropolitan critics is known—is in its present approximate condition.

CLEVER MADY CHRISTIANS has won applause for her performance, and the venerable Lucille Watson (whom Boston remembers in "No More Ladies") is described as "wonderful" as a sophisticated grand dame, home in her native Washington after 20 years in Europe.

HIGH SCHOOL LAD GETS CONTRACT

By Louella O. Parsons

David Selznick

HOLLYWOOD, March 29 If you want to know one of the ways stars are born in Hollywood, this tale may interest you. I carried a story about a Don King—a Fairfax high school lad who worked in a gas station where agents, movie stars, producers and directors buy gasoline every day. Tom Kelley, the photographer, saw the boy and thought he was such a photogenic type he took his picture.

After the item appeared young Mr. King had the studios bidding for him. Now he has signed with David Selznick on a long-term contract. David tells me he expects to groom the boy and sees in him a potential star. That, coming from a producer who brought Katharine Hepburn, Ingrid Bergman and Freddie Bartholomew to the screen, augurs well for Tom Kelley's protege. After Don signed the contract the first thing he did was to take his mother to Ciro's.

I HAVE A HUNCH that Robert Montgomery's fans will be glad that he has shelved his favorite characterization — a psychopathic such as he played in "Night Must Fall" and "Rage in Heaven" for a lighter role. He has been loaned to Columbia for "Heaven Can Wait," a story about a saxophone-playing pugilist who passes himself off as an industrial tycoon. I must say, even though the fans like Mr. Montgomery better as a gay, man-about-town, he is excellent in those neurotic roles — probably because he looks so healthy and so normal and does not give the plot away when we first see him.

• • •

PRIVATE JIMMY STEWART may be interested in hearing that his new girl friend, Ruth Hussey, whom he dated for the first time the night before he went into the Army, will be writing him from her dressing room on the Columbia lot. Ruth has been borrowed from MGM for the Rita Hayworth role in "Our Wife," John Stahl's picture, and it is the first time she has been off the home lot since she signed her contract. In the meantime, the pretty Hussey girl and Raphael Hakim have said "adieu" to their romance and while she hasn't reached the stage of knitting socks for Jimmy Stewart—yet, there's a real interest there.

Wet Blanket

By Isabel Johnston

THE Aviation Works had promised him a job. Young Tom was jubilant. He was only 18, but he felt a man. At last he could lift some of the burden from his father's stooping shoulders. He would be able to buy Mom a pretty dress. Take Marylin on a dancing date, too.

Of course, he would only be a factory hand. But he could go to night classes. If he showed ability the company might help him get a scholarship at some engineering college. At least he could rise to a job as foreman and work his way up to the top as many another self-made man had done.

Mom would be tickled pink. And Dad . . .

Tom's steps lagged a little. For years his father had toiled as bookkeeper for the aviation plant. The company was so huge they never had noticed his father's conscientiousness. His father had grown prematurely gray in the same job at the same meager salary. He was a hard worker, but the company always promoted someone else. Tom knew his father would loathe having his son follow in his drab footsteps.

Not that his father would argue against Tom taking the job. He would merely wince a little. His face would grow older and sadder and graver. He would make his voice blank of all expression. In his resigned, noncommittal way, he would say,

"I'll let you make your own decision, son."

Tom hated that phrase! All his life his father had thwarted his enthusiasm with lukewarm neutrality. There had been the time when he wanted to buy an expensive airplane kit and his father had wanted him to buy some stuffy and cheaper book. It had been Tom's own money, too, money he had earned running errands for neighbors. He had been sure he could win a prize in the Boy Scouts' competition with his airplane. But his father hated anything to do with aviation.

"UP TO YOU"

"It is up to you, son," his father had said noncommittally when Tom had chattered eagerly about how he was going to earn the kit.

Even as a little boy, Tom sensed how hard his father worked. He knew the model airplane kit was too expensive for a poor youngster. It had taken Tom a long, laborious time to earn and save up enough money. Then, jubilantly, he had persuaded his father to go to the department store and at least look at the kit with him. When the clerk brought it out, Tom pointed out all the marvelous possibilities. When the moment came for a final decision, little Tom looked up to his father for guidance.

His father was wearing the void, blank look Tom knew so well. So Tom drifted over to the book counter and bought the stuffy book his father seemed to think was so marvelous. All the way home Tom tried to cheer himself up by exclaiming over the book's bright pictures. But he never read it. He managed to get a model airplane together with scraps, but it didn't win the prize. In his dashed enthusiasm, he decided that maybe his father had been right.

A few years later he had come home full of enthusiasm about making the skate sail he couldn't afford to buy. His father made no comment. While young Tom excitedly figured out the cost of materials on paper, his father had merely watched, sitting stooped and quiet in his chair. His father didn't say a word either for or against it. But after a while young Tom had torn up the paper and gone upstairs to bed. Tom had never brought up the subject of making a skate sail again.

It seemed almost unbearable to go home and meet his father at lunch. So Tom bought a hot dog and spent the afternoon shopping for workman's overalls. He didn't actually buy a pair. But he tried a number of them on. There was one beaut that had all sorts of trick pockets. It even had a pocket in the back, where you could carry a hammer handily. It only cost $1.98, too. While he was in the stores he tried on workman's shoes. They had special soles to keep a man from slipping.

It was almost 5:30 and the stores would soon be closing. On his way out of Madden's he bumped into Marylin. She lived next door and he had seen her that very morning, but he greeted her as if she were the postponement of a painful case in court. Costly settled in a drug store booth, he told her all about the job that had been offered him. For a moment he sucked his drink through a straw, enjoying the impression his news made on her.

"But father wouldn't think it was good enough for me," he answered so earnestly that he laughed out loud, his spirits suddenly booming.

"I can always get a job with a small concern," he boasted, "where my ability will be noticed."

"I can see your ability right now," she said, widening her eyes admiringly.

She looked so pretty and cute he gave a quick glance around to make sure no one was looking and then leaned over and kissed her squarely on the mouth. And she kissed him back too.

Somehow that kiss kept him from thinking about his troubles all the way home. He laughed and joked and talked about nothing and lingered a moment after she had run into her house. His mind was filled with visions of the day when he was old enough to be married. He and Marylin would have a little sports roadster maybe. And he bet it wouldn't cost much to build a trick little sailboat for Sunday afternoons.

He broke into the house whistling. His father was already home, sitting in his armchair, waiting for dinner. He looked pale and exhausted. But even that didn't dampen Tom's spirits.

"Hi Dad!" he said in passing and went into the kitchen to find out what it was that smelled so good. His mother was just taking pork chops and squash pie out of the oven. He kissed her and made a great fuss over the way she always cooked his favorite food.

In spite of his recent soda, he ate heartily. Almost twice as much as his father. As usual Dad merely picked at his plate. All through the meal, Tom joked and kidded with his mother. He even managed to make his father laugh once or twice.

Tonight Tom didn't offer to help his mother with the dishes. He followed his father into their small living room. Tom waited until his father lit the pipe he allowed himself twice a day after lunch and dinner. Then Tom undertook to break his news.

"I'VE DECIDED"

"I've a chance for a job at the factory," he said eagerly.

His father lighted his pipe again carefully. He drew several long draws. He seemed to be studying, weighing everything with impartial care. The silence made Tom nervous. He lit a cigarette for himself, puffed it once or twice and then crushed it in an ash tray. His father was drawing his face together in that blank, neutral look Tom knew so well.

"I'll let you make your own decision, son." The phrase Tom always dreaded came out in measured, lukewarm tones.

For a moment, Tom stared at his father in hopeless, resigned misery. Then he remembered Marylin's kiss—the roadster and sailboat he was going to buy. He gave his father a quick glance of pity. Why, his father was only a broken old man who never even believed in his own future. But he himself . . . Tom laughed out loud at the way a weak man's bluff had cowed him all these years.

"Thanks, Dad," he cried in high spirits. "I've decided. Tomorrow I start building airplanes at the factory."

THE END

Don't miss Dorothy West's dramatic story on this page Monday. It's about an unhappy wife, whose only treasure is a fur-trimmed coat she has bought without her suspicious husband's consent.

The Principal Characters in "Wet Blanket"

TOM, a youngster with dreams of the future, but whose father, who has spent a lifetime at a desk, fails to encourage his son. But the fact that he has landed a job places Tom in an entirely different world—and in a different attitude toward his father.

TOM BARES WOES

"If you enter the Works as a factory hand, you stay a factory hand." He expounded his father's views as energetically as if they were his own. "In a big concern like that, you can be smart as a whip and yet never get a raise."

"Maybe you're right," she conceded dubiously.

"Look at my father," Tom went on. "He really has a brilliant mind. And where has slaving for the Works ever gotten him? Exactly nowhere. Made him an old man before his time."

"But I thought you were crazy about aviation!"

"Sure," Tom answered gruffly. "But I'm not a fool!"

"Oh, I know you're not," she

"But lots of boys . . ." Marylin began.

And she kissed him back, too.

PAN AMERICAN'S HYDROFORMING UNIT ASSURES SMOOTHER GAS

The completion of the world's first commercial hydroforming unit, at Texas City, Texas, has just been announced by the officials of the Pan American Refining Corp.

It is capable of "reforming" low anti-knock naphthas into high anti-knock gasolines. The unit is designed to make all of the low anti-knock naphthas produced by the two largest cracking units in the world. The product from the Texas City plant will be blended into the principal grades of gasoline marketed by the American Oil Co.

The hydroforming process is so named because it is a catalytic process for the "reforming" or converting of low octane naphthas to high octane gasolines, at high temperatures and pressures, in the presence of hydrogen gas.

PARTICULAR INTEREST

This process should not be confused with hydrogenation because the hydroforming process dehydrogenates, that is, takes hydrogen away from hydrocarbons, whereas hydrogenation involves the addition of hydrogen to hydrocarbons.

The hydroforming process is of particular interest today from the standpoint of national defense, as it not only gives the motoring public a new type of gasoline of high anti-knock value, but provides a new source of high octane aviation fuel, as well as a large potential quantity of toluene, a substance virtually needed in the manufacture of T. N. T.

High octane gasolines are of great value to commercial and military planes because these gasolines enable them to fly at higher altitudes, at greater speeds, over longer distances and to have a greater carrying capacity.

In 1939 the United States produced 20,000,000 gallons of toluene. This first installation of the new hydroforming process could be used to produce approximately 5,000,000 gallons yearly, which would amount to 25 per cent of the total toluene produced in this country during 1939.

SMOOTHER OPERATION

Of vital interest to the motoring public is the fact that this new producet will assure them of smoother, more powerful and more efficient anti-knock qualities on the road. Tests which have been made under the most grueling circumstances indicate that this new type of gasoline gives outstanding high octane road performance.

The hydroforming process, as installed at the Texas City refinery, is the development of the research organizations of several companies. The design of the Texas City plant was carried out by the engineers of the M. W. Kellogg Co., in collaboration with the engineers of the Pan American Refining Corporation and the Standard Oil Company (Ind.). The unit will operate under patent license from the Standard Catalytic Company.

DEALERS SEE NEW STUDEBAKERS

Defense Won't Halt Production of Autos

Although defense is the automobile industry's primary concern, priorities and shortages of materials do not threaten interruption in the production of motor cars, according to Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corp. Rather, they simply mean a new challenge to the ingenuity of the automotive engineer, Hoffman said at a meeting of New England Studebaker distributors and dealers held here at the Somerset.

Defense needs may alter, but not strangle, the nation's cars. Aluminum pistons may give way to cast iron, but they'll be excellent pistons. Radiator grilles may not be die cast, but they will be just as full of glitter.

Body sections may be welded by a different process but they will be as strong, as sturdy, as sleek and streamlined.

All this, Mr. Hoffman believes, and he says automotive engineers welcome the challenge as part of their contribution to the nation's defense.

"As long as we have steel, we'll have automobiles," said Mr. Hoffman. "Defense needs are going to make new demands, are going to make the engineers work harder. We'll have to make changes in designs, production machinery and the cars themselves.

"These things won't be simple to accomplish, but they are not too difficult. Engineers have been faced with similar 'crises' for years; it's just a part of the job, an everyday problem that can be licked.

"We have heard unofficially, that zinc priorities will be ordered. That might mean new radiator grilles, perhaps grilles made of steel.

"Moreover, they will make grilles of steel and chromium plate them. They would look just as bright. They might have to use plastics for interior hardware, steering wheel spokes and any number of things. Why not?

"Engineers are trained by education and experience to take such problems in their daily work and solve them. The public does not need to worry about its future motoring. As long as we have steel, we'll have cars, and better ones, too."

Other officials who directed the 1941 Spring Meeting were K. B. Elliott, vice-president in charge of sales, who unveiled to the dealers three new models in the Skyway Series; M. S. Brooks who lectured on the features in the new Skyway Series; Morrow Krum of Roche, Williams and Cunningham, Studebaker Ad-Agency; Arthur Chanter, New England Regional Manager and Harry Liggett, Boston distributor.

SHELL CHIEF STAGE BIG PARTY

Motormart Salesmen To Hold Competition

Joe Hughes, president of the Hughes Motor Mart, Cambridge distributor of DeSoto-Plymouth cars, at a meeting attended by 34 dealers and salesmen announced a special salesmen's contest to run concurrently with the gigantic treasure hunt running from March 16 to May 17.

Badoian Brothers, Cambridge; Belmont Auto Co., Belmont; Mystic Valley Motors, Arlington; Conway Motor Co., Medford, and Community Sales Co. of Concord, make up Team No. 1.

Joe Hughes.

Hughes Motor Mart, Inc., Cambridge; Winchester Motors, Inc., Winchester; H. C. Angle, Everett; Stratton - Patterson, Malden, and W. H. White Motor Co. of Lexington, comprise Team No. 2.

George Badoian of Badoian Brothers was elected captain of Team No. 1, and Eddie Levine, of Winchester Motors, captain of Team No. 2.

Joe Hughes was given the honorary position of official scorer and DeSoto District Manager E. C. Andrews was appointed to the difficult and hazardous position of referee.

Losers will pay for a banquet at the end of the contest. Interest and rivalry of individual salesmen is so great at the present time it may overshadow the national DeSoto-Plymouth contest. During the first week Team No. 1 scored 6400 points and Team No. 2 scored 6800 points which indicates conclusively the two teams are pretty evenly matched.

NEW HIGH OCTANE GAS UNIT

Scientists and chemists have been working on the catalytic principle of reforming low octane napthas into high octane gasoline, and C. F. Hatmaker, vice-president of the American Oil Co., announces the completion of the world's first hydrofoming unit. See story on this page.

Hamlett Tells Of Vital Part Trucks Play

Practically all industry would cease to move if the trucks of this nation were suddenly blacked out of existence. This is one of the startling revelations brought out by J. Edgar Hamlett, vice-president of The White Motor Company, in an address before the Rotary Club of Brookline.

Among other things, Hamlett brought out the fact that there are 2619 communities right here in New England which are entirely without railroad service and must depend upon the motor truck for all transportation.

Altogether, there are 48,000 communities of the United States which have no rail service.

Even in cities which have rail service, practically all local transportation is carried on by motor trucks and the rail heads themselves are fed by truck. Too often railroads and trucks are regarded as mortal competitors with nothing in common.

As a matter of fact, railroads operate extensive truck fleets as an adjunct to the rail end of the business. Furthermore, 14% of the freight carried over the rails is automotive.

CARDINAL ASSAILS WAR TREND IN U. S.

the "All-out-aid to Britain," His Eminence said:

"That of course is a law now and we must respect it as such. However, with the cruelty and horrors existing today in Europe I don't know why anyone would want to get into that mess.

"It is no longer a war of armies, but a war of murderous weapons and devices in which there can be no direct retaliation.

"The food question is most serious and I am happy to be a member of former President Hoover's committee to send food to Europe.

INNOCENT VICTIMS

"The women and children in Europe today—what have they done to bring on these conditions?

"They are the innocent victims of war, and I am going to do everything possible to help get food to Europe. I am proud to be able to serve on Mr. Hoover's committee."

The Cardinal became quite critical over this nation's interference in foreign affairs by saying:

"Without rhyme or reason we are meddling with the European question. Europe has never been able to settle that question among themselves because of the longing for power and more power."

SHOULD SEND FOOD

"It is futile on our part to attempt to settle their problems and will cause more calamity in the world.

"Instead of sending armaments and other death-dealing devices, we should send food.

"No doubt there is a good deal of vanity and foolish ambitions that goes with the folly of a few men which results in war and world chaos."

Returning with the Cardinal were Msgrs. Jeremiah F. Minihan, secretary, and Michael J. Splaine of St. Mary's Church, Brookline.

Axis Freighters Defy Blockade

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, March 29 (AP)—Three Axis merchantmen left Brizilian ports last night and early today in an apparently co-ordinated effort to penetrate the British blockade.

The German freighter Dresden, of 5567 tons, had not been reported for 11 hours after sailing from Santos last night. She had a crew of 50.

The Italian oil tanker Franco Martelli, 10,535 tons, left Recife with a cargo of oil and a crew of 50 or 60.

The Italian freighter Frisco, 4610 tons, left Fortaleza with a crew of 20 or 30 aboard.

(Dispatches from Argentina said the Italian freighter Amabilitas, 5425 tons, also was reported getting ready to sail from Bahia Blanca.)

NAZIS FINE FRENCH TOWN

VICHY, March 29 (AP)—The town of Moulins in German-occupied France was reported today to have been fined 50,000 francs because of the appearance of anti-Nazi slogans written on the walls of buildings.

Baltimore's Glory Revived

THOMAS JABS ORIOLES WITH FLAG AMBITIONS

By HERB FINNEGAN

HAVANA, Cuba, March 29—The glory that was Baltimore's in the day of John McGraw, Hughey Jennings and Wilbert Robinson, and later in the day of Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw and Jack Bentley, is being revived by Alphonse "Tommy" Thomas, pitcher on Joe Cronin's championship Washington team of '33.

"TOMMY" THOMAS

Thomas succeeded Rogers Hornsby as manager at Baltimore last spring and brought the Orioles home in fourth place in the International League. This year, surrounded by a flock of precocious youths and a sprinkling of veterans, he has pennant ambitions.

It would be quite a feather in Tommy's cap if he could turn the trick, for Baltimore hasn't won a pennant since Grove, Earnshaw, Bentley and company won seven straight in the early 20's.

Last year Baltimore lined up with Etten on first, Corbett on second, Skeeter Newsome at short, Nagle at third. In the outfield were Benjamin, Eddie Collins, Jr., and Dixie Howell. But such is the turnover on a Double A club (most of them are in the majors) that the present team has Robinson at first, Corbett at second, Seiling at short, Hafey at third, old Frank McGowan, Skinny Graham (Somerville) and Bob Hamilton, a great hitter, in the outfield.

But it won't stay that way long. Old Bob Seeds is coming back to bolster the outfield, and Thomas can get Dixie Howell from Cleveland if he wants him. Also, young Eddie Collins will come back from the A's if he doesn't clinch a regular berth because he wants to play regularly.

And in the infield, they expect to have first baseman Al Flair from the Red Sox, thus releasing the 20-year-old Robinson for outfield duties or farm him out as a first baseman for another year.

Robinson, a Texan, is a giant of a kid. He's a great left-handed batter and needs only experience to become one of the game's headliners.

Corbett is the old Phillies first baseman who is fast becoming an accomplished second sacker. He always could hit. Seiling was down south with the Red Sox last year and optioned to Little Rock.

He's an aggressive youngster who should do well in Double-A ball. He won't field with Skeeter Newsome (who will?) but he'll hit a longer ball and more consistently than the present Sox utility shortstop.

* * *

Get Kids Right Out of High School

Tom Hafey at third is a cousin of Chick Hafey's, old N. L. batting champion. Tom is a 200-pound six-footer with a rifle for an arm. He looks like a great prospect.

Last year Cracher and Redmond, a couple of veterans, did the catching for the Orioles. This year they have a kid by the name of Howell (they call him Dixie, too) who batted .362 at Ottawa in the Canadian-American League and who can throw like young Red Walsh.

But it's in the box that Thomas has made his greatest advance. He has a 19-year-old named Russell Niller who looked like a world beater against the Red Sox. Tommy says he'll stick despite the fact that he has never pitched a game of professional ball before this year.

He's got an 18-year-old named Gordon Muller and a 20-year-old named Ken Trinkle, all right-handers and all Baltimore kids who have glowing futures in the game.

His ace may be a fourth Baltimore youngster, Don Kerr, who won 15-6 for the Harrisburg club in the Inter-State League last year and led the loop in strikeouts and earned run average. Thomas gets all these kids out of high school and nurtures them carefully.

For veteran pitchers he has Floyd Stromme, Clyde Smoll, Dick Midkiff and Monte Weaver among others.

The nucleus of a great club, with a young, fast infield, good hitting and some veterans who have proved their worth in Double-A ball.

Yes, Thomas has made a fine start toward reviving the glory that was Baltimore's in the days of John McGraw, Hughey Jennings and Wilbert Robinson, and later in the days of Lefty Grove, Jack Bentley, George Earnshaw and Thomas himself.

"Skinny" Graham Unpredictable

Tab for future big league stardom: Ed Robinson, Bob Hamilton, Don Kerr, Russell Niller and Catcher Dixie Howell . . . Thomas says young Eddie Collins was the most improved player on the Orioles last year . . . an ideal competitor Old Dixie Howell, Etten and Nagle all batted in more than 100 runs for the Orioles last year, and Thomas is depending on Al Flair, Bob Seeds and possibly Bob Hamilton to replace them . . . "One day you look at Graham and wonder what he's doing in this league," says Thomas of Somerville Skinny, "and the very next day he'll look like a busher. He's the best in the world when he's good but he's not consistent" . . . George Polzer, 1940 Cornell captain, is battling Hal Seiling for the shortstop post. Polzer stole home in the ninth inning at Sarasota to tie the score at 3-all. He stole home 19 times last year as a collegian.

Kearsarge, N. H., Bowler Opens 1941 Classic

By WALTER KILEY

Accompanied by a mighty din of crashing maple, the American-Record's sixth annual candlepin championships—New England's outstanding bowling tournament—got underway at the Huntington Club today.

To Walter H. Newhall, veteran Kearsarge, N. H., campaigner, went the honor of officially launching the mighty competition, one, which will, during 13 tournament days, play host to several thousands of New England's most rabid men and women keglers.

Newhall's efforts in the men's singles was the spark which ignited the 1941 classic, one which will in all probability see the establishment of several new world candlepin records before the grand finale on Saturday, April 12.

An unusually large opening day schedule was on tap for today, with out-of-towners in the majority, most of them in holiday spirit, making their annual American-Record pilgrimage in the spirit of fun as well as competition.

From North Adams came the McCuen Package Goods Store team; from Salem the Salem All-Stars; from Farmington, N. H., the Rondeau Shoe Co. team, and from South Berwick, Me., the Palaca Alleys Five.

In view of the fact that the tournament committee decided to keep entries open over the week-end, it is impossible at this time to say with accuracy just how many starters there will be in this year's pin congress. But an all-time new high is confidently expected, despite the many men lost to bowling through the draft.

Late mails have returned entries of unprecedented proportions. Prominent are four teams representing Our Lady's Alumni Bowling League of Newtonville, filed by Secty. Ernest Sullivan of Newtonville. In the lot are three men's and one women's teams.

N. H. SENDS LATE ENTRIES

Dave Snyder, an old hand in American-Record tournaments, sent in a battery of stars from Colonial Beacon Oil Co.'s Stuart st. office. In the lot are two men's and one women's teams, as well as many individual and doubles starters.

Maurice H. Muzzey of Peterborough, N. H., filed the entries for four teams from his town, including an "open" men's team captained by Earle H. Naglie and representing the Peterborough Fire Department. Another, an amateur outfit, is the Emmis Filling Station Five. The two Peterborough women's teams are called the "Red Wing Girls" and the "Monadnock Girls."

Several impressive "open" teams were in today's mails including an all-star Greater Boston quintet captained by George W. Dadmun of Allston; the Richards Cafe Five of Belmont, and the Lakerville team from the Hemenway Alleys of Framingham.

The United Shoe Machinery Corp. came in strong with a couple of teams, a man's from the U. S. M. A. A. of Beverly and a women's from the Boston office of the United Shoe Machinery Corp.

STILL TIME TO ENTER

Among the many other team entries just received are the St. Joseph Men's Club Five of Medway; Maxie's Lunch Team of the Symonds Alleys, Amesbury; the Green Lantern Associates of Marblehead; the Atwood and Merrill Company of Beverly;

In most cases all five members of the various teams will compete in the singles, doubles and mixed doubles as well as the team competition.

Many of them will be seeking to win the highly prized All-Events title which goes to the man and woman amateur who hit a high combined total in—the singles, doubles and team competitions.

To those New England bowlers who have neglected to file entry, the committee provides a further chance. By mailing their entries over the week-end to the Huntington Club, 255 Huntington ave., Boston, their acceptance will be assured.

BRUINS STAKE ALL ON 'KITTY-BAR-THE-DOOR'

Loss of Cowley Ruins "Streamlined" Tactics

Junking their famed "streamlined" tactics which brought three N. H. L. championships to Boston, Les Bruins will unveil a hybrid system to 16,000 fans at the Garden tonight as round five of the bitterly contested playoff series with the Leafs gets underway.

Insisting that the offense that carried the Bruins through their last 32 regularly scheduled games with only one defeat cannot work now with Bill Cowley out, Art Ross and Cooney Weiland are determined to continue the same tactics against the Leafs which brought a 2 to 1 victory on Thursday.

And after a 3 to 0 win in first Stanley Cup game with Toronto, all was great. Then came injuries to Bill Cowley and Bobby Bauer. And with those mishaps came the quick disintegration of "streamlined" hockey.

Two stunning defeats, with the Leafs running up 12 goals, soon convinced the Bruins' board of strategy that something drastic had to be done in very short order or elimination was ahead.

Up came Ross and Weiland with the old "Kitty-Bar-The-Door" system, plus a few modern interpolations.

The revision paid off in a 2-to-1 victory Thursday to bring the teams all even coming into tonight's affair.

ODDS SHIFT TO BRUINS

This game should just about decide the series.

If the new methods of the Bruins click, they figure to grab the odd game in the series, particularly in view of the fact that the windup will be here in Boston.

The Leafs, on the other hand, would undoubtedly end the struggle in Toronto Tuesday if they win tonight. If they can whip the body checking and defensive tactics of the Rossmen in Boston, they should duplicate with Bingo Kampman and Hank Goldup back in the lineup Tuesday at Toronto.

But the smart lads are betting 10 to 6 that the Leafs won't win tonight and they'll give 10 to 6 that the Bruins will win the series.

The odds makers are of the opinion that Les B's have hit upon the ideal method of beating the Leafs.

SEEK TO SLOW DOWN LEAFS

The Bruins will take the ice tonight and step right into the Leafs early and often. They will pay little if any attention to scoring until they've slowed those flying Torontonians down to normal speed. Once that is done, the Bruins will slowly move from defensive tactics and try to set up scoring opportunities.

This type of play will give the Leafs the bulge in attack but that last period may find Connie Smythe's gang hanging on as best they can while the Rossmen go on to clinch the decision.

And the same three lines will carry on.

With Bill Cowley definitely out for the series, Art "Stoney" Jackson will center his line and work with Roy Conacher and Eddie Wiseman. The Kraut line will be intact and much more effective for Bobby Bauer is again in shape having recovered from a cut instep that required a couple of stitches.

KIDS COME THROUGH

The third line will be made up of Pat McReavey, Terry Reardon and Herb Cain. This unit is supposed to be the "weak sister" but to anybody who saw that game in Toronto Thursday night, this trio may be the one that will steal the show.

These two kids together with Herb Cain were given the assignment of stopping the Appe-Drillon-Nick Metz line. Critics questioned the wisdom of this move for the Leafs No. 1 line had picked up four of the seven goals the game before and it seemed suicidal to pit a kid like McReavey, playing in his first series, against Drillon—the wing who holds the playoff scoring record. Then, too, the idea of Reardon competing against Apps didn't seem to fit the picture either.

But it did.

This trio not only back checked to perfection but they worked through to set up the winning goal which Herb Cain masterfully completed. It's true that Drillon scored the Leafs' only goal but it came with the Bruins a man shy. And, at that time, the M-R-C line wasn't operating.

This makeshift trio was amazing. If they can duplicate tonight, it will help the Bruins no little.

WINGS HOLD EDGE ON HAWKS

(By the Associated Press)

The scramble for the finals of hockey's Stanley Cup series still looks like a wide open affair between Boston and Toronto, the National League's two top teams during the regular season, but the Detroit Redwings are a big step in front in their business with the Chicago Blackhawks.

Detroit opened its best of three semi final series by pasting the crippled Hawks on the Redwings' home ice and the future looks bright for Jack Adams' youngsters. They are now in a position to bounce right into the finals by winning the second game at Chicago Sunday night, or failing that, will have the advantage of playing the third and deciding game on their own ice Tuesday.

The Redwings led all the way in the game at Detroit, Sid Abel scoring the first goal in the last minute of the first period. Then Carl Liscombe added another midway through the second stanza and after Mush March finally rammed in Chicago's sole tally in the third, Joe Fisher pushed in the Wings final score.

WINGS WOULD BE CINCH FOR BRUINS

Speed-Ray Saves Hockey Friendship

Should Detroit, a heavy favorite, eliminate the Black Hawks and the Bruins eliminate the Leafs, the B's would be a cinch for the Stanley Cup, for the Detroit gang hasn't whipped the Ross men all year.

Bruins' doctors insist that the ligaments aren't torn in Bill Cowley's knee but that the injured member is so sore he is definitely through for the year . . . the Leafs and Bruins traveled down to Boston in the same train, but they were four cars apart.

The players met in the dining car but there was a decided chill in most cases . . . Roy Conacher and Bobby Davidson did get together as was expected, for they are neighbors and friends . . . Turk Broda grabbed Herb Cain and wanted the details on that last goal, for the Leafs net guardian just couldn't see how it was made.

• • •

Some thief was really impartial on the trip here. He stole Bobby Bauer's purse and then pilfered Gordie Drillon's . . . Lionel Conacher, one of the greatest hockey players of all time, visited Kid Brother Roy after the fourth game and, according to the Bduins' left winger, really blasted him for some mistakes he made.

• • •

Credit the famed SPEED-RAY camera for saving a friendship. During a jam behind the cage in the second game of the series, Porky Dumart was hit in the mouth with a high stick. He insisted that his roommate, Milt Schmidt, pulled the dastardly deed but Milt pleaded innocence. A SPEED-RAY shot in last Sunday's Advertiser clearly showed that it was Stanowski's stick that hit Dumart while it was Schmidt who was jamming Stanowski in the boards. Not only did Dumart apologize but Milt asked for a picture of the original to keep for all time as a souvenior of a saved friendship.

• • •

Mel Hill will be the 15th man dressed tonight . . . if the Hershey club had been eliminated from their playoff series with Pittsburgh, Thursday, Art Ross planned to recall Gordon Bruce, Red Hamill and Jake Shewchuk to have them ready in case of further mishap . . . Hershey is now deadlocked with Pittsburgh at one all and the final game takes place tonight for the right to move into the top round.

• • •

The Leafs leave for home directly after tonight's game while the Bruins will get away tomorrow night . . . Connie Smythe didn't come down with the squad but is expected in this afternoon. He may bring Bingo Kampman and Hank Goldup with him but neither is expected to play.

• • •

Terry Reardon has been terrific in this series to date. Never have the Bruins had a more aggressive kid or one more eager to win. His fighting tactics so aroused one Toronto writer that he wrote an article warning Reardon that one of the Leafs would part his hair with a hockey stick if he continued his tactics . . . let them come, this kid really loves it.

• • •

Wally Stanowski is really a deceptive type of youngster. He only weighs 170 pounds but is so heavily padded that he looks like a 200-pounder on the ice. He's really friendly off the ice and made a great impression on several of the Bruins' rooters who came back on the same train.

'BABY-FACE' McGOWAN FIGHTS IN NATIONALS

Lester McGowan, baby-faced bantam who won the All-America crown and the hearts of New England ring fans last January, will bid for Boston's cheers again in the National A. A. U. ring title meeting at the Garden on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

DOCK-WALLOPER — Sammy Derrico, from the docks of Cleveland, will be gunning for a title at the national boxing championships which will be held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Boston Garden.

McGowan's name was among three last minute entries received today by Tom Kanaly for the amateur ring meeting here next week.

McGowan, high school lad, edged Orlando Fanti in a special bout in the intercity show at the Garden last month and won the New York Golden Gloves title a few weeks ago.

The other entries are Bob McQuillan, Buffalo, 126-pound champion, one of the best boys at the weight in the East. McQuillan also was seen in All-America finals. The third entry is Johnny Green, winner of the Chicago-New York Golden Gloves lightweight championship.

With titleholders from all sections of the Amateur Athletic Union from the Atlantic to the Pacific, plus All-America and Golden Gloves winners, next week's National Tournament is truly a "Championship of Champions."

SEVEN FROM OZARKS

Entries continue to pour in from distant sections for the A. A. U. Tournament. Tournament Director Kanaly today also received entries from Arkansas, Utah, Missouri (St. Louis, and Maryland.

The seven battlers from the Ozarks are all Arkansas Ass'n A. A. U. champions. They are due in Boston this afternoon. These youngsters have piled up a grand record this season and are expected to "go places" in the nationals.

The team is as follows: Edward Tuller, No. Little Rock, in the 112 pounds; Aubrey Holderfield, Scott, Ark., in the bantamweight division; O. D. Hightower, Hartman, Ark., a slashing featherweight with plenty of punching power; Frankie Castle, Fort Smith, Ark., in the 135 pounds division; Windy Morris, Hartman, Ark., a sure two-fisted welterweight; Louis Christian, another Fort Smith boy in the middleweight class and Ragan Kinney, Hartman, Ark., 200 pounds heavyweight.

KEPT OUT BY DOCTORS

From Salt Lake City three real contenders for national honors arrive in Boston today. William Fowler, the featherweight, is a two-time winner of the Intermountain Ass'n championship, is an excellent boxer and has a good punch. He is a willing and aggressive fighter and has his heart set on copping the national title this year.

Carl Richardson, the welterweight, hails from Albion, Idaho. He is a willing boxer, smart and packs a good wallop.

Gene Robertson, the heavyweight, makes his home in Salt Lake City. He is a star fullback on the University of Utah squad and is also a three-time winner in the heavyweight division of the Intermountain Ass'n. In 1939 when the National Championships were held in San Francisco, he was an almost certain winner except for the fact that the doctors refused to let him go on in the semi-finals because of an injured ear. He is tough, strong and aggressive, a good boxer with the desire to make good.

TWO RINGS MONDAY

Due to a change in the championship boxing rules, which now permit two-minute rounds up to the semi-finals and finals, two rings will be used. On Tuesday and Wednesday night but one ring will be in use.

The bouts Monday will get going about 3 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock an intermission will be called until 7:30 when the contests will be resumed until the list has been brought down to 64 qualifiers for the quarter-finals on Tuesday.

Tuesday night's show will start at 7 with 32 bouts on the card, and on Wednesday night the show will start at 7:30 with 24 contests coming up in the semi-final and final bouts.

Lynn Five Wins Again in Chicago

CHICAGO, March 29 (INS)—St. Mary's High of Lynn, Mass., edged St. Joseph's of Oil City, Pa., 39-37, in the second round of the 18th annual National Catholic basketball tourney at the Loyola University gymnasium.

In other second round games, Memorial of New York defeated St. Aloysius of New Orleans, 37-34, Central of Fort Wayne, Ind., whipped St. George, Evanston, Ill., 34-25, Holy Rosary, Pine Ridge, S. D. walloped Abbey High, Cannon, Col., 53-24, and Leo of Chicago toppled St. John's, Patterson, N. J., 43-25.

In first round games, St. Michael's Union, N. J., defeated McCooey, Hannibal, Mo., 51-17 and Campion, Prairie du Chien, Wis., won from Neuman, Williamsville, N. Y., 42-23.

Twin Features On Arena Card

It will be bargain night at the Arena when Promoter Paul Bowser stages his weekly all-star wrestling tournament next Wednesday. Bowser announces that a double main event will feature his card.

In one of the headline matches, Pantaleon Manlapig, champion of the Philippine Islands, clashes with Red O'Dell of California, who raised quite a rumpus here recently as the Green Dragon. The second main bout will have Lou Plummer, Iowa Thunderbolt, against Lord Albert Mills, England.

Dodgers Counting On Reese and Reiser

By LAWTON CARVER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 29 (INS)—Charlie Dressen, who infielded in the majors before becoming a manager and from there move on into a coaching berth with the Brooklyn Dodgers in their current ascendancy, generally is a reasonably quiet, easy-going sort of a gent.

But when you bring up the names of Reese and Reiser you find yourself in the company of a man who can really get excited.

And when a veteran becomes excited over youngsters you've got the nearest thing to exuberance that you are likely to encounter in one baseball man in behalf of another.

Sitting around in the role of manager of the Dodgers' B, or second team, which was to meet the Detroit Tigers again today while the A or first team in charge of Manager Leo Durocher tours Texas in exhibitions with minor leaguers, Dressen discussed baseball generally; the Dodgers' pennant chances and other odds and ends, but didn't offer more than a thimbleful of first hand quotes.

SOLD ON REESE

Almost invariably his replies started with "he said" or "he thinks" and with that it was pinned on Durocher—until the talk got around to Pee Wee Reese, the shortstop, and Pete Reiser, the centerfielder. Dressen then quoted Dressen at length, and the substance of what he had to say is that these two are standout stars of the future, maybe as early as this year.

"Why, that Reese was just a baby last year, and he still did somewhat better than all right; he has more confidence now, and watch him go from here on," Dressen said in part of the 22-year-old shortstop, who will hold down that job as a regular, according to plans, and enable Durocher to move over to second in place of Peter Coscarart, now in a bad slump with no signs of improvement.

A super-terrific fielder, Reese is now powerhouse as a hitter, but last season still compiled an average of .272 in 84 games, or only seven points below his average at Louisville the previous year, notwithstanding the slightly discerning fact that he was hit in the head by Jake Mooty of the Cubs and laid up for two weeks, then cracked an ankle and was out for the rest of the season.

"And that Reiser has everything, too," Dressen went on. "He is going to be a great centerfielder, a great one. He can throw and field and, I believe, hit. He is banging along at about a .300 hitting clip for us in exhibitions, to give you an idea."

JUMPED LAST YEAR

Substantiating Dressen's opinion, the records show that Reiser hit .378 at Elmira and a wholly respectable .293 in 58 games for the Dodgers last season before he, like Reese, was felled by an injury. He was 21 years old this month and the youngest of all the Dodgers.

If those two—Reese and Reiser—stand up this season as they seem intent upon doing, there can be no doubt as to the potency of the Dodgers in that National League race. Their long training grind indicates that the Dodgers have the reserves, a fine blending of youth and age, considerable fielding and power and potential pitching strength.

Tabor's Bat Paces Sox

HAVANA, March 29 — Earl "Lefty" Johnson and Emerson Dickman pitched brilliant baseball here, and their Red Sox mates crashed out 13 hits—highest Red Sox total of the spring campaign—to tumble the world champion Cincinnati Reds, 9-2, and even their training camp series at two victories apiece.

Johnson, slated to go the full nine, tired at the finish of six and Dickman took over to twirl hitless ball the rest of the way although he was considerably wild. The Reds were limited to four hits, all off Johnson, who took a shower at the close of the sixth with the Sox out front, 6-1.

Jim Tabor, by the way of making complete amends for his recent training-break, paced the slambang Sox attack with two doubles and a single. Pilot Joe Cronin chipped in with three singles.

The Hose found "Whitey" Moore for nine of their 13 hits in the five innings the Cincinnati flinger was on the hill. He was shelled out of the game in the fifth in which the Boston club counted four runs.

Ten went to bat in this big frame. Foxx tripled, Cronin singled, Tabor walked and Doerr doubled.

Monty Pearson was found for three runs in the seventh on a Tabor single, a pinch-bingle by Stan Spence, a walk to Dom DiMaggio, Finney's single and a long fly by Foxx

MILLER DROPS ROLE OF 'POUTER' TO GIVE YOUNG B'S HELPING HAND

By BILL GRIMES

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 29—Although admittedly one of the greatest shortstops in baseball since he joined the Stengelmen two years ago, Eddie Miller didn't fit in the Bees' picture until this spring. In other words, Eddie was a problem child. His interests centered entirely around Edward R. Miller. And, moreover, he didn't take kindly to helpful suggestions from managers and coaches.

Eddie Miller's background in baseball may have had some bearing on the attitude he displayed when he reported to the Boston club. He got off to a bad start, while in high school in Pittsburgh. At the age of 16, he signed up to play with "The Waners," a semi-pro club sponsored by Paul and Lloyd Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates and managed by their brother, Ralph. For playing semi-pro ball, Eddie Miller was declared ineligible by the Pittsburgh school authorities.

So, he quit school in '34 and went into organized ball, playing shortstop for Springfield, O., in the Mid-Atlantic League. At the close of that season, the Cincinnati Reds bought him for $1000. The following year he went to his first training camp, Tampa, Fla., with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

WEARY OF SHIFTS

Ike Boone, who managed Toronto that season, didn't want any part of the 18-year-old shortstop, so he sent Eddie Miller to Wilmington, N. C. Then Eddie went to Porto Rico and Tampa with the Reds in the spring of 1936 and played third base on the B squad, which was managed by Long George Kelly, the current Bees' coach

After one season at Toronto, Eddie was shipped to Syracuse, where he played until June, when he was picked up by the Reds. After an exhibition game in Salt Lake City he sat on the bench for the rest of that year.

Eddie was making the rounds rapidly and doubtless was getting fed up.

At the end of the 1937 season, Miller was notified by the Cincinnati Reds that he had been sold to Newark, which was, and still is, in the New York Yankee farm system.

And, that was when the Reds made a very serious mistake. For, right now, when they are about to defend a world's championship they could make very good use of Mr. Edward R. Miller. In fact, Owner Powel Crosley would gladly agree to Bob Quinn writing his own price tag on the Bees' shortstop.

EDDIE MILLER

The Yankees assigned Eddie Miller to Kansas City, from which club he was purchased by Quinn late in '38 to report the following spring.

Eddie Miller has played only one full season in the National League. He broke his leg in a collision with Al Simmons about half way through his first year and didn't get back into action until last spring.

From the day he joined the Bees Eddie Miller was a great shortstop. But he had his own ideas on how baseball should be played. Naturally in some instances, he was right. But he was wrong on many of his other stants.

Casey Stengel made a very careful study of Eddie Miller during the first year. And, he also went out of his way to make inquiries, concerning his new shortstop. Finally, Old Case decided to play a waiting game with Mr. Miller.

He'd heard that Miller wanted Tony Cuccinello at second base and saw Eddie pout when Sibby Sisti was playing on his left. But, Old Case was still running the club. Casey didn't even offer to make any suggestions to Miller about his weaknesses at the bat.

Then, Eddie had a run in with Bob Quinn over his 1940 contract. He refused to name his own figures. And, he returned the contract sent to him in Florida. At last, he went into a conference with Quinn at Bradenton and within five minutes he had his name on the dotted line.

OUT OF THE BARREL

During the 1940 season, Eddie Miller began to see the light but none too clearly.

One of Eddie's greatest handicaps was that he didn't realize the value of money. And, that is indeed a rare mental condition among the present day ball players. He was a Good Time Charlie. He spent his money as fast, yes, even faster than he could earn it. But, the increase in salary he received a year ago made it possible for Eddie to get out of the "barrel." He's now in the clear which in all probability accounts for the change in his attitude.

From the first day he reported here, Eddie Miller has paid strict attention to all instructions. He has even gone to Casey Stengel and George Kelly and asked for suggestions on this and that. And, in turn, he has offered his help to other infielders. I've seen him instructing Bama Rowell on the art of making pickups, a feat which is almost foreign to the second baseman.

Eddie Miller is headed toward his greatest season in baseball. There isn't any question in the mind of the writer but that Eddie Miller will hit .300 this season. And with Babe Dahlgren at first base, he'll be even more of a sensation defensively, for the former Yankee is by far the best target any infielder ever fired at.

So keep an eye on Mr. Edward R. Miller, who is the sparkplug of the "Team of Tomorrow," which is only just around the corner.

Bees Bow To Millers

SAN ANTONIO, March 29—By bunching three hits for two runs in the ninth inning, the Minneapolis Millers took the odd game from the Bees, 5 to 3.

Alva Javery, the elongated right-hander from Worcester, was the Millers' victim. The score was tied when he went in and he pitched cleverly in the seventh and eighth, but in the final round with two down and a man on second he was nicked for successive hits by Fawsett and Geary, which produced two runs and gave the Millers the verdict.

George Barnicle started for the Bees and in three innings gave up three hits and yielded two runs. And, then Al Piechota took over and after allowing the Millers to tie the count in the fourth breezed through the next two stanzas.

The Bees were not able to do much with any of the Minneapolis pitchers. They were held to four hits, three of which came in the three run third inning.

After a scoreless first inning, the Millers pushed across a couple of runs in the second inning when Rowell tried to get Wright going into the third on Barna's sharp grounder.

The throw got away from Majeski, who filled in for Sibby Sisti, as the regular third sacker was laid off due to a sore corn. Later Barna scored on a long fly to Averill.

Hogan Has 4 Stroke Lead

ASHEVILLE, N. C., March 29 (AP)—It was the field against Ben Hogan again (a situation quite familiar a year ago) as the second round of the $5000 "Land of the Sky" open golf tournament got under way today at the Biltmore Forest C. C.

Benny regained his putting touch in the delayed first round yesterday. While almost all the boys ball player from Ardmore, Pa. some went as high as four, Hogan got down in one putt on 10 of the 18 for a four-under par 67 that was the only sub-standard score of the day.

It gave him a four stroke margin over U. S. Open Champion Lawson Little and Sam Byrd, the former ball player from Ardmore, Pa. Their 71's were one stroke to the good over Ky Laffoon. Next in line at 73 were Ray Mangrum of Oakmont, Pa., and Leonard Dodson of Kansas City, followed by a cluster of 74 shooters who included such leading lights as P. G. A. Champ Byron Nelson, Horton Smith, Jimmy Hines, Ralph Guldahl and Jimmy Thomson.

Perhaps the greatest contrast to Hogan's putting show was Nelson's round. Where Ben missed six greens out of 18, Nelson hit every one in par. But Lord Byron took 39 putts on the fast, bumpy greens.

Sarno Named Line Coach To Complete B. C. Staff

Amerino "Moody" Sarno, an All America tackle at Fordham in 1935 and a former Everett High School star, today was named assistant line coach at Boston College. Sarno was appointed by Head Coach Denny Myers. The announcement was made by John P. Curley, director of athletics.

Sarno is the fourth assistant coach to be appointed by Head Coach Myers this week. Harry Marr, youthful graduate of Notre Dame and Tommy Powers, quarterback of the Cotton Bowl Eagle eleven were named end and freshman coach respectively Monday. Yesterday Carl Brumbaugh was selected to coach the backfield and act as Myers' first lieutenant. The appointment of Sarno completes the Boston College coaching staff.

Amerino—or "Moody" as he prefers to be caled, is a native of Everett. He played four years of high school football for Coach Dennis Gildea before graduating from Everett High School in 1932. The following fall he moved to Fordham.

BEAT ROSE BOWL CHAMPS

In 1932 Sarno was the outstanding frosh lineman at Rose Hill He won a first string tackle job in his sophomore year. That was the season Fordham defeated Dixie Howell's famous Alabama eleven 2-0.

Sarno blocked a Howell kick to give the Rams the ball game over an Alabama team which the following New Year's Day played and won in the Rose Bowl.

In 1933, '34 and '35 the new Boston College line coach was named both Metropolitan and Eastern left tackle. In 1935 he was also chosen on a number of All-America elevens.

At Fordam Sarno played with stars like Johnny Del Isola, also from Everett; Paul Howell, from Chelsea; Johnny Druze, former B. C. end coach now at Notre Dame with Frank Leahy; Joe McArdle, Lowell boy who took the same route to South Bend; Ed Danowski, famous forward passer formerly with the N. Y. Giants and many other standout Ram stars.

TEACHES AT EVERETT

Del Isola, now coach of freshman linemen at Dartmouth and former All-Professional League star when with the N. Y. Giants, rates Sarno "the best tackle he ever played with or against."

After graduating from Fordham Sarno assisted Coach Gildea at Everett High School in 1938 and '39. Last fall he assisted with the coaching of Phillips Andover Academy.

For the past three years Sarno has been teaching English and Social Studies at Everett High School. He is married and the father of a 10-month-old daughter.

Boston College's spring practice period opens Monday afternoon at 3:30 on the freshmen field at the Heights.

Yale Mermen Trail Michigan In Title Meet

EAST LANSING, Mich., March 29 (AP)—Michigan's swimming pool marvels, seeking a ninth consecutive National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n championship, went out in front again in the quest for team honors, but a stubborn Yale crew kept right on their heels.

With six events concluded, and five remaining today, the Wolverines, Western Conference and National A. A. U. indoor champions, stood at the head of the parade with 36 points.

Giving ground grudgingly, and piling up unexpected points, the Elis had 33, indicating the outcome of the meet might not be decided until the final event.

Behind Michigan and Yale were Wayne and Ohio State, 9 each; Princeton 6; Minnesota 5; Williams 3; Villanova, Springfield and Occidental, 2 each, and Dartmouth, Brown and Stanford, 1 each.

Charley Barker, University of Michigan sprinter, equalled a record winning the 50-yard free style event.

Barker was clocked in 23 seconds flat.

Michigan had another champion crowned in the next event, the 150-yard back stroke, as Francis Heydt won by a wide margin over Dan Dannebaum of Yale, who barely touched out a second Wolverine, Bill Beebe, for second place.

Howard Johnson of Yale successfully defended his title in the 220-yard free style event. He edged out Jim Welsh of Michigan in 2:12.5.

TIM HEFFERNAN of San Francisco attracted more attention than any of the Californian boxers as they worked out at the Tech Gym for their trial battles in the A. A. U. championships at the Garden on Monday night . . . Heffernan is a heavyweight, and he is confident he will blast his way to victory in this class.

Heffernan isn't even worrying about Rodey O'Dooley, Irish heavyweight from Steamboat Springs, Colorado, who is expected to be one of the stars of the nationals . . . While O'Dooley was born in Ireland, Heffernan comes of Irish parents . . . San Francisco has as many Irish-American residents as Boston, and it is natural that a heavy hitting heavyweight like the youthful Heffernan should be a home-town favorite.

It was a swell looking group of kids that Al Sandell, director of the California team, had workout at Tech . . . Tommy Rawson, Tech coach, was happy to turn over the facilities of the Tech gym to the visiting boxers . . . Tommy has boxed in San Francisco, and he was always royally treated in that city.

Heffernan showed in his training that he is a big, powerful fellow who can hit as well as step around a ring.

The other California boxers also looked impressive. They were Gilbert Arce, 112 pounds; Raymond Gabito, 118 pounds; George Tapia, 126 pounds; Dick Porteur, 135 pounds; George Duke, 147 pounds; Frank Gimble, 160 pounds; Martin Goldberg, 175 pounds.

Tom Kanaly and Gene Driscoll were today greeting boxers from all sections of the United States. It was expected that by tomorrow afternoon that all of the visiting mitt wielders will have arrived here. Included in the list of boxers will be representatives of 22 states and the District of Columbia.

The trial bouts will be held on Monday afternoon and evening, the semi-finals on Tuesday night, additional semi-finals and the finals on Wednesday evening. It is the grand opera of amateur boxing and should furnish the greatest show of the indoor season.

Still Riding With the Bruins to Win

I AM STILL riding with the Bruins to win their playoff series from the Maple Leafs. I refused to become discouraged even when the Maple Leafs were leading in the series by two victories to one. Now that the series has been tied up by the Rossmen I believe they will show the punch needed to gain a victory.

The Bruins have a young hockey club, and as a result they possess the physical reserve to rally after a setback. I am sure they will play smashing hockey for the remainder of the series.

Hockey fans are not as loyal to the home team as is true of baseball followers. When the Bruins lost the first game of the two game series in Toronto, the sale for tonight's contest went cold. If the Bruins had also lost the second tussle in Toronto, there would only be a small gathering in the Garden tonight.

The Bruins' 2 to 1 victory changed the feelings of the fans. There was a rush to pick up reservations once the series had been tied. The result will be another capacity crowd of 16,200 fans tonight.

When a visiting player is sent to the penalty box regardless of whether he committed an infraction of the rules or not there is intense jubilation among the home towners. The same fans ride the unfortunate officials when a local player is justly penalized.

The same condition that exists in Boston is also true in every other city where hockey is played.

Baseball fans are different. While they like to see the home club win, they will give the visiting team credit for its good plays.

* * *

JOCKEY McCREARY continues to bring in winners at Tropical Park . . . This youngster has shown remarkable riding ability this season . . . Hap Fenelon, new Rhode Island State steward, made a trip to Boston to visit with some of his many friends in this city . . . Gov. J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island will not have any worries about the conduct of racing at Narragansett Park with Hap Fenelon, Tom Thorp and Sam Nuchols in the stewards' stand.

QUINCY MAN TOPS KEGLERS

HUNTINGTON BOWLING ALLEYS, March 29—Veteran Walter H. Newhall of Kearsarge, N. H., officially launched the sixth annual American-Record Grand Candlepin championships before a large and enthusiastic gallery here this afternoon.

Newhall fired the opening shots of a tournament which will during the next fortnight attract several thousand of the foremost men and women keglers in the country.

Due to the pressure of officially opening the 1941 classic, Newhall fell short of his usual high scoring efforts. He had two good opening strings of 103 but missed several gettable spares in his third string and hung up a slim 84 for total of 290.

Bill Humphrey of Quincy jumped into an early first day lead in the men's singles with a three-string total of 307, composed of 96-100-111 strings.
